Dante and the Gas Range
They Will Fly
Her Quivering Flesh
Rattlesnakes Are Easy

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

DANTE and Virgil traveled the infernal parts of hell where some wormed and rolled in red mud and then going deeper, found Satan, himself, held captive in ice up to his navel. His waving batlike wings supplying the cold, as with three mouths, he chewed three sinners, including Judas and Brutus.

A STRANGE combination of hot and cold is exhibited at Chicago's American gas convention. It's a gas stove and refrigerator combined, no bigger than the average gas range. Here also the heat is above, and the refrigerator in the lower part of the unit.

IN spite of warnings and disasters men and women continue their flights to conquer the ocean.

Two Frenchmen are on their way from Paris to Buenos Aires.

A Fokker monoplane, Southern Cross, is ready to start from San Francisco Bay to Australia. Mrs. Grayson will try to fly from Maine to Denmark. A German Heinkel plane is coming here, via the Azores. And Ruth Elder, 23-year-old American girl, is at Horta after her flight over the Atlantic.

WHEN this was written in Los Angeles, four big army planes were flying over the business part of the city. And a big Ford plane was making its daily arrival in Los Angeles from San Diego, with an invitation from San Diego's Chamber of Commerce to fly down and watch San Diego grow for one day.

Those that run risks today will have contributed to absolute safe flying in the future. Lindbergh says flying overhead with a good pilot and machine is safer now than automobiles.

Better machines will soon make ocean flights as simple and safe as a flight over the English Channel, for which Northcliffe, a few years ago, offered a $50,000 prize.

MOVING pictures show Lionel Barrymore holding the red-hot branding iron, Aileen Pringle providing the snow-white shoulder and quivering flesh to which the "red-hot" iron will be applied.

Thousands, shuddering at this branding, will hardly realize that such torture would have been considered natural a few years ago. Men were skinned alive, impaled on sharp shafts and left dying for hours. At the time of Henry the Second, a workman was branded on the cheek with a hot iron, without permission he left his parish to find work in another.

THOSE Henry the Second workmen may comfort united coal mine workers of America, forbidden by court injunction to interfere with the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporations open shop.

That injunction and others like it will do a good deal to make unions powerless. But it isn't as bad as being branded for going out of your parish to look for work. We do improve, although slowly.

NEAR Riverton, Wyoming, Ted Lee killed 115 rattlesnakes with a shovel.

Rattlesnakes rely entirely on poison and conceit, which makes it easy to destroy them. So with those that pervert truth in history, religion, or otherwise. They rely on a poison which is not reliable, and are disposed of easily.

SENATOR Reed of Missouri dissatisfied with national conditions, says, "The times are ripe and rotten ripe for a change." He thinks the Republican party must be thrown out "if the people are to remain free."

It will be difficult, however, to throw out a Republican party that has nation wide prosperity, a cash surplus of $800,000,000 and a voting plurality of 7,000,000 behind it. Very heavy to lift and throw out.

EVERY year there are born in Germany 15,000 pairs of twins, 200 sets of triplets. And a sprinkling of quintupeds. No nation has so many. This human fertility is more important to Germany than any of her other factories. The real wealth is human intelligence and industry, and the world's mothers create its real wealth.

A NEW YORK Stock Exchange seat sells for $250,000. There are only 1,100 seats on the Stock Exchange, many "inactive," kept for sentimental reasons, by men who do no "trading." These 1,100 seats may well be worth seven hundred million dollars some day. We are in the billion-dollar era.

1,500,000 TO SEE GRID GAMES TODAY

Ohio State-Northwestern Tilt One Expected To Draw Big Crowd

New York, Oct. 15—Early season records for football attendance are likely to be shattered today which will see more first class teams in major games than any previous early season date in the past. The biggest crowds are those expected at the Navy-Notre Dame game in Baltimore, the Northwestern-Ohio State battle at Columbus, and the Stanford Southern California game at Palo Alto. These three games together are expected to draw more than 150,000 spectators.

Here in New York, New York University and Fordham will play before 50,000 at the Yankee stadium and Columbia and Colgate will entertain approximately 18,000 at Baker Field. Yale and Brown at New Haven will play the host to another 50,000 and 40,000 are expected to turn out to see Harvard and Holy Cross in their annual tilt in Harvard Stadium. Then in Philadelphia between 60,000 and 70,000 are expected for the Pennsylvania-Penn State contest, always one of the most largely attended games on the Pennsylvania schedule.

Chicago and Purdue probably will draw close to 50,000 at Chicago and 30,000 are expected for the Michigan-Wisconsin game at Madison. Another crowd approaching the 40,000 mark will see the Alabama-Georgia Tech game at Atlanta.

In all the day's football games will probably be seen by well over 1,500,000 persons, the length and breadth of the land.

REMUS PLEADS "NOT GUILTY"

Nov. 14 Set by Judge as Trial Date for Wife-Slayer

Cincinnati, Oct. 15—A plea of not guilty to the indictment charging him with murdering his estranged wife, Mrs. Imogene Holmes Remus, 38, here Oct. 6, last, was voiced today by George Remus 49, former multi-millionaire "bootleg king," when arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Chester R. Shook. Nov. 14 was fixed by Judge Shook as a date for the trial of Remus who is accused of first degree murder.

Accompanied by Attorney Charles Elston of this city, Remus entered the courtroom shortly before noon. When his case was called, Judge Shook asked Remus whether he had read the indictment which charged him with having fatally shot is wife in Eden Park here.

Nov. 14 Date

"I have, your honor," answered Remus, stepping up to the bar. "I waive the reading of the indictment, your honor."

The court, however, instructed the clerk to read it.

This done, Judge Shook asked Remus whether he was "guilty, or not guilty?"

"Not guilty, your honor," Remus promptly replied.

When the court asked him who represented him, Remus stated:

"Mr. Elston and myself, your honor."

Judge Shook then fixed Nov. 14 as the date for Remus' trial, explaining that this was the earliest date possible. The court announced that "no matter what intervenes, no excuses will be accepted," and the trial will start at 9 a. m. on that date.

She explained that reports showed rain and high winds prevailed over almost the entire distance of her route over the ocean, although the weather here was perfect.

The aviatrix said she might hop off tomorrow morning.

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 15—Dieudonne Costes and Lieutenant Le Brix, French aviators arrived at Port Natal, Brazil, at 12:10 a. m. today, completing the flight from St. Louis, Senegal, from where they hopped off early yesterday.

When the fliers landed they completed the first flight made from the mainland of Africa to the mainland of South America.

The flight across the South Atlantic was made in very good time, the French aviators traveling the 2,125 miles in about 22 hours.

From Natal they will fly to Rio De Janeiro and from there will proceed to Buenos Aires, the ultimate destination of their flight.

After their arrival the fliers were welcomed by the governor and taken to the Hotel Central where they were official guests.

AGAIN SAYS BILL UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Attorney General Turner Continues Attack on Marshall Law

Columbus, Oct. 15—Reiteration of his claim that the Marshall Bill, designed to provide legal compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace in liquor cases, "will not remedy the unconstitutional system of courts condemned by the unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States," is made by Attorney General Edward C. Turner, in a communication, published today, addressed to Riley Smith, Cincinnati real estate dealer.

Opponents of the Marshall Bill are campaigning for its defeat at a statewide election to be held Nov. 8.

"I challenge the Anti-Saloon League, which is sponsoring the Marshall Bill and misleading a lot of ministers throughout the state, to produce a single lawyer of recognized standing as an able lawyer who will say that the Marshall Bill has cured the defects pointed out by the supreme court of the United States," Turner wrote Smith.

SINCLAIR AND FALL READY TO GO ON TRIAL

Stage Set for Outstanding Criminal Hearing of Legal History

IMPOSING COUNSEL ARRAY

Difficulty in Getting Jury Expected; Defense To "Try Tight Case"

Washington, Oct. 15—Principals and supporting cast for what is to go down as one of the outstanding criminal trials in American legal history were assembled in Washington today impatiently awaiting the "oyez" of the court bailiff.

On Monday, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil operator and turfman, face the bar of justice charged with criminally conspiring to defraud the government of the rich Teapot Dome oil fields of the naval reserve. Both here today closeted with their "million dollar" array of counsel going over last-minute details and mapping out the strategy of their defense, while a few blocks away Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special federal oil counsel, were completing the last small details of their case.

Trouble with Jury

A long, drawn-out trial is expected. To begin with, great trouble will be experienced in getting a jury. The action of the U. S. Supreme Court last Monday in voiding the Teapot Dome lease as "shot with fraud" was a blow to the defense, and difficulty will be had in obtaining 12 men who have not read that fact in the headlines of the papers. On the other hand, government counsel, still remembering the "hoy jury" that acquitted Fall and E. L. Doheny on a similar charge, will move most cautiously in their examination of veniremen.

They have to draw from, already assembled, two regular criminal court panels—a total of 104 men—but it is not at all unlikely that a special venire will have to be drawn before the "12 peers" are assembled.

Imposing Counsel

An imposing group of lawyers has been assembled to defend Fall and Sinclair. At the head of Sinclair's counsel is Martin W. Littleton, the brilliant New York lawyer who defied the senate committee that first aired the oil scandals of 1923. He will be assisted by George Hoover, prominent Washington barrister. Fall's counsel is headed by William E. Leahy, one of the best known and successful lawyers in the capital, in conjunction with Mark Thompson of New Mexico, a lifelong friend of the former cabinet officer.

From present indications, the defense will, in the parlance of the court, "try a tight case," or in other words sit back and place the complete burden on the prosecution by keeping the defendants and other important witnesses off the stand.

NEW YORK MAN TO ADDRESS ROTARIANS

Cameron Beck, Stock Exchange Personnel Director, To Be Luncheon Speaker

Cameron Beck, personnel director of the New York Stock Exchange, will be the speaker at the Rotary luncheon to be held at Hotel Harding Monday noon, it was announced today by members of the club.

Mr. Beck, who for 10 years has, it is said, directed the youthful destinies of more boys of high school age than any man serving any other financial concern in the country, recently returned from a tour of 11 states, during which he addressed 90,000 school students.

CHURCH DAMAGED

Columbus Edifice Believed Deliberately Set on Fire

Columbus, Oct. 15—Police and fire department officials here today were investigating evidence of the work of fire bugs, in connection with a blaze which did $1,700 damage to the W. Broad Street Presbyterian Church last night. The blaze was discovered soon after the choir, which had been practicing, had left the building. First examination indicated the building was deliberately set on fire, police said.

SIXTEEN LOSE LIVES AS CAR STRIKES BUS

Liner Paris Rams Norwegian Steamer Half Mile from Statue of Liberty Island and Seven Are Missing; 26 Rescued by Ferry and Other Vessels

CRASH WORST INDIANA CROSSING TRAGEDY

Victims Were Members of Sahara Grotto Party on Way to Barn Dance; Six Believed Fatally Hurt, 13 Seriously Injured

TWENTY-THREE persons are believed dead today, the result of two accidents that occurred in Indianapolis and New York City late last night and early today. Sixteen were either killed outright or fatally hurt when a traction car struck a truck near Fort Benjamin Harrison, while seven are missing after the liner Paris struck the Norwegian ship Bessegen in New York Harbor.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 15—Sixteen dead, six believed to be fatally injured and 13 others seriously hurt was the toll today of one of Indiana's most disastrous grade crossing accidents.

An inbound Union Traction Co. car last night leaped into a truck and trailer carrying more than 60 members of the Sahara Grotto to a barn dance at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The interurban car, said to be going 60 miles an hour, struck the crowded trailer at the Twenty-first-st and Emerson-av crossing, in the outskirts of Indianapolis.

The dead: Mrs. R. P. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meredith, Opal Merriman, Harold Wolford, John Watson, Lee Merriman, Ralph Parker, Charles V. Wheeler, Weber Von Glasscock, William S. Hodges, Charles O. Polsel, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dallas, Carl Jones and Mrs. Ada Jones.

13 Killed Outright

Thirteen of the victims were killed outright. Robert Dallas and Mrs. Frank Meredith died several hours later in a local hospital. Several others of the more seriously injured are not expected to live.

All of the victims lived in Indianapolis. Charles O. Polsel, who was killed outright, was an official of the Indianapolis Board of Trade.

The demolished trailer was attached to a bus, also crowded with passengers. The bus had cleared the crossing but the trailer was midway on the tracks when the speeding interurban crashed into it.

The front end of the interurban was demolished but only the motorman and conductor were reported hurt.

The truck was owned by the Foster Engineering Service.

Lose Five of Kin

The motorman, at City Hospital, said he whistled for the crossing and didn't see the truck until he was about 40 feet from it.

One of the most pathetic survivors of the crash was Mrs. Von Glascock who lost five members of her family in the accident. She lost her husband who was killed instantly, her sister, Opal Merriman, her brother, Lee Merriman and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meredith. Mrs. Ethel Merriman, her sister-in-law, was seriously injured and may die.

Arrests Ordered

Chief of Police Claude Worley ordered the arrests of Merrill and Titus, crews of the interurban, and of Harry Stewart, 38, driver of the truck.

Five bodies were found on the pilot of the interurban car. The car stopped 10 poles from the scene of the crash. The poles are 90 feet apart. This was taken as an indication that the car was going between 50 and 60 miles an hour.

Many injured were removed in private automobiles and police early today had been unable to definitely determine the total number of injured.

FEAR WARFARE

Cleveland Police Work Overtime in Underworld Killings

Cleveland, Oct. 15—Authorities here were apprehensive today, and Detective Inspector Cornelius Cody was working every man on the force overtime, as the bloodiest "underworld" warfare in the city's history seemed in progress.

Twice within the last week the mind of Cleveland's gangland have blazed and four bullet-riddled bodies, all the interments of the combat, Frank Yosfelli and Jack Drowosenia, Philadelphia gangster, were found shot to death, in an east side park early in the week.

Thursday night Joe Lonardo, millionaire sugar dealer, and his brother John, were trapped and shot down in a barber shop.

MOTHER OF FIVE NEAR DEATH AFTER SHOOTING

Cleveland, Oct. 15—Mrs. Elizabeth Jurick, 38, the mother of five children today was in a local hospital reported to be dying from bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted by her husband.

Late yesterday the woman stumbled across the street to the home of a neighbor seriously wounded. She wrote a note, accusing her husband, and then fainted. Police are searching for Marko Jurick, 39, whom she recently married after divorcing a former husband.

FRIEND SAVES MAN, CHILD FROM DEATH

Despondent Widower Forces Child in Room, Opens Gas Jets

Columbus, Oct. 15—Despondent over the death of his wife, David Sells, 50, of Columbus, forced his little daughter, Alberta, 14, to remain with him in the bathroom of their home here for two hours, while open gas jets threatened death to both of them each minute.

The lives of both probably were saved when a friend of Sells entered the home and found both the man and child semi-conscious from inhaling gas. The child had scrawled a note: "Daddy made me close the door and turn on the gas. Goodbye everybody."

Both were taken to a hospital, where it was said both would recover. It was said Sells had been despondent over the death of his wife and previously had attempted to end his life.

BEERY UNDER BOND

Former Shelby County Treasurer Pleads Not Guilty

Sidney, Oct. 15—Alpheus Beery, former treasurer of Shelby County, was at liberty under $10,000 bond here today following his arraignment Friday on three charges of embezzling $37,000 in county funds. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned. His trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 31.

Beery was arrested early Friday following the report of the county grand jury. Prior to the grand jury report, state examiners reported a shortage and discrepancies in his accounts. Last July Beery told of having been waylaid and robbed as he was enroute to a bank with county funds.

None the Worse For Adventure of Ocean Flight, Says Ruth Elder, When She and Haldeman Reach Horta

HORTA, The Azores, Oct. 15—"We are none the worse for the adventure and we are overwhelmed by the interest displayed in us."

Ruth Elder, bronzed by sea winds and smiling cheerfully, made this statement today to the throng of officials who welcomed her immediately upon her arrival on the U. S. S. Barendrecht, which rescued Miss Elder and her pilot, George Haldeman, when their transatlantic plane "American Girl" was forced down at sea by a failing oil line.

The thrilling flight and the fortunate rescue constituted just another adventure for the "American Girl," who has been an aviatrix for several years and experienced many of the perils of the air, and who seemed to be but little concerned over her new experience with the peril of the sea.

Pays Capitain Tribute

With a leather "wind-breaker" buttoned closely around her to protect her from a driving rain and stiff wind, wearing the same boots in which she donned borrowed clothes Dutch rescuers, Miss Elder paid high tribute to Captain Gras of the Barendrecht who she said had apparently sighted the "American Girl" and, realizing it was in trouble had headed his ship to and stood by to rescue the fliers.

Story About Plane

"We were aboard the Barendrecht 10 minutes after we hit the ocean," Miss Elder explained when asked about the thrills of the ocean rescue, and she seemed to accept it all as a matter of routine and she appeared comparatively disappointed when she told of the de-

ON THE

Streets of Marion

WITH THE STAR STAFF

Marion is treading dressing up in ... style. Developments ... are continually in evidence ... trend toward modernism ... continue, men who are ... community expansion ... that we are "growing up" ... attire in harmony ... is found in the ... residential districts of ... persons formerly found ... town district.

... who had their offices in ... of town many years ... main thoroughfares in ... several months ... that the venture ... has proven successful in every respect.

The same drift from the uptown district is taking place in connection with other lines of business. A fine new funeral home was opened a few days ago at the corner of S. Main and Columbia-sts and another place of the same kind is to be opened soon on E. Center-st. Not many years ago it was thought that even undertakers could not handle their business properly from locations beyond the central part of the city.

Realtors Views

It is generaly predicted among real estate men that before the lapse of a great many years, most of the large dwelling houses on E. Center-st, as far east as Greenwood-st, will be used for commercial purposes. The same development is expected on other main thoroughfares leading from the central part of town.

Modern residence apartments, classy "shoppes" handling millinery and other merchandise sold chiefly to feminine patrons, tea-rooms and similar business enterprises are designated as the types likely to be found in the new comercial sections.

High rents and lack of adequate parking space for automobiles in the uptown district are said to figure prominently in this modern development.

Marion's zoning ordinance, administered by the city planning commission, has opened residential sections for commercial purposes and this has also contributed largely to the expansion.

An employe of a local restaurant who was formally notified several days ago that the business would manage to struggle along without his services in the future contributed a note of humor to the incident by suggesting a more general observance of "fire prevention week."

WHILE stadia tremble under the pressure of week-end gridiron frenzy, the "bug" has germinated and is well established at McKinley Park. No national glory awaits the hero of the moment in the youngsters' tilts as in the big games, but that doesn't detract from their spirit. The awards, at best, are black eyes and torn stockings. A score of so-called experts on the game might find sufficient material here at one sitting to furnish the reading public with applesauce for the next decade. How do you suppose Walter Eckersall, Hugh Fullerton, Davis J. Walsh, Les Conklin, Tom Buchan an and all the rest would analyze the system of a team composed of five players, one lineman a center, and a complete backfield? The official members of one particular squad consists of a captain and three assistant captains. They represent a quartet of triple-threat men, fists, tongue and family background. The head captain has an additional threat, alone responsible for his respected position. He owns the ball.

RESIDENTS of those sections of Forest and Summit-sts and Elmwood-dr lying south of Mt. Vernon-av have little use for an alarm clock these days, providing they sleep with their bedroom windows open and are not exceptionally heavy slumberers.

For several weeks thousands upon thousands of blackbirds have been spending the night in the trees dotting Brightwood addition and covering Indian Mound. Each morning shortly after 6 o'clock the birds take to the air in great flocks and fly eastward, settling for a short time in the trees near Elmwood-dr. They fly at a low altitude and their screams have proved a disturbance to late risers.

On one occasion the writer counted seven exceptionally large flocks form above the trees on Indian Mound and take off one at a time. To all appearances the first flock, coming to rest in the trees over Elmwood-dr, waited until the last flock had formed over Indian mound before continuing its journey eastward.

The birds presumbaly split into small groups during the day for as the afternoon wears on they return to their nightly lodging place in small groups. From 3:30 o'clock on until dusk there is a steady stream of birds into this wooded tract. Those who have had occasion to stroll through Brightwood addition before dusk or early in the morning have seen limbs of trees bowed low with their burdens of feathered lodgers.

Several times efforts have been made to drive the birds to other quarters. Scores of them have been brought down with small caliber rifles and air guns in the hands of boys but the flocks continue to haunt this section. In several instances shotguns have been brought into play but with no greater results.

THOSE that want the very latest may have it in grade crossings by driving a few yards beyond the corporation limits on S. Prospect-st at the junction of the highway and the Pennsylvania Railroad. Concrete has replaced planks with a certain, smooth way that smacks of permanency. A dozen eggs may be considered safe in the most experienced hands at this point, it is reported, but with us yet is the watchword, "Cross Crossings Cautiously."

FAME has its limitations. This was shown recently in common pleas court when a group of aliens appeared before the judge for their final naturalization examination.

All of the applicants were able to give the name of the nation's president and most of them could designate the governor and United States senators.

But at that point their souce of information regarding government appeared to be exhausted. Questions regarding Marion County officials, including our representative in the state legislature went unanswered or brought amusing attempts to respond intelligently.

But persons who have made an investigation say that the new citizens from foreign lands are not alone in their lack of information on local government. It is alleged that at least 20 per cent of the populace, including those who have resided here many years would be unable to name a majority of the city and county officials.

"COLUMBUS Day" was observed for the first time in the county's history by closing of the courthouse this week.

The innovation was not inaugurated without a period of discussion in which a few of the officials thought at the outset that possibly it might be unwise to add another holiday to the county's list.

But the protests were not unduly vigorous. Why should they be? County employes possess all of the ordinary human attributes, and one of the most predominant of these is the willingness of every person to take a day off when the opportunity offers.

"Columbus Day" has been designated as a legal holiday and why disobey the law? That was a question hard to answer and for that matter, nobody tried with much determination to argue in the negative.

So it is altogether likely that the observance will become an annual event, with the courthouse closed lighter than a drum on the anniversary of the discovery of this land of ours. It is exceedingly difficult to break away from custom and especially when that custom gives us a chance to spend a day far from the scenes of our daily toil and worry.

Nimble Little Girl Steals All Honors of Music Show From Two Prominent Stars

"The Five O'Clock Girl" Good Entertainment, but "My Princess" Has Little "Audience Appeal," According to New York Critic

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND
(Special to The Star)

New York, Oct. 15--Neat and pert, pretty and sly, Philip Goodman's "The Five O'Clock Girl" has come in, to pack the Forty-Fourth Street Theater from pit to dome. This is real musical comedy, demure, but business like, not unmindful of the Cinderella necessity, yet, at the same time, darting off into momentary paths of gratifying lunacy. Dressed and staged with the prodigality of a Dillingham, the show is more reminiscent of a de luxe "Oh, Boy!' or "Very Good Eddie" than a "Sally" or "Sunny." Mr. Goodman has, quite remarkably, revived the tradition of the old Princess entertainments with an added dash, and ingenuity and color.

The featured players, Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw, bring individual brightness and the feeling of romantic youth to their roles, but the evening belongs to a nimble slice of femininity named Peri Kelton, whose quiet antics the first night irrevocably snapped the thread of plot and reddened many a palm. A tippy-nosed sparrow of a girl, Miss Kelton speaks with the bronchial gasp of Pauline Lord, and dances with the comic effervescence of a female Jack Donahue. She has come a long way from her priceless Chaplin impersonation a few years ago, and she will go further. I predict her name in 100-watt mazdas within another season.

Back 20 Years

The chorus work is skilful and complex; Miss Eaton is as personal as a birthday cake figure (incidentally, she has acquired a quality of Sennett-like glow that she never, as a "mere" star, possessed;) there are caverns and massive sets by Norman Bel Geddes, more like Egyptian tombs than modern apartments, and while Kalmer and Ruby might have been given a freer hand for their foolery and tunes, "The Five O'Clock Girl" makes satisfying entertainment.

When you go across the street to "My Princess" at the Shubert you feel yourself put back 20 years--to the days when Grace Van Studdiford was sauntering around in the ruby flechings of "The Red Feather", and when every prima donna had a Big Number at a quarter of eleven. "My Princess" is the local springboard from which Miss Hope Hampton has essayed to dive in to the dubious waters of operatic acclaim. I hope, in the attempt, has not hit her Titian head on a rock, or suffered a case of colorature crame.

Has No "Appeal"

Singing with a purity and melodic line that are surprising in their austere accuracy, Miss Hampton has been mildly unfortunate in her choice of a vehicle. For "My Princess"—out of Sheldon by Donnelly—is a specious, mirthless and occasionally ludicrous legend, whose glare and golden trappings cannot conceal its paucity of "audience appeal." The fact that Cinderella has again been resuscitated in the person of the diva doesn't matter a bit. "My Princess" is as ornately and pompously dead as Pharoah, just as "The Five O'Clock Girl" is unquestionably as crispy alive as a Fifth Avenue flapper.

Mr. Belasco's first offering of the season is a psycho-analytic tragedy by William J. Hurlbut. Last year Mr. Hurlbut explored, with a palpitating finger, the depths of religious mania as an escape from illicit passion, in "Bride of the Lamb." This year he takes us into the dark chamber of a girl's heart which beats—though she doesn't know it—to the unaware pulse of her brother-in-law. The sole defect in this interesting if over-emphasized play is the fact that all the other characters, modern New Yorkers, have apparently never heard of Freud and Jung, and consequently stagger blindly through the erotic mists with the heroine. This implausibility is smoothly glossed over by a capital company, in which Beth Merrill, as the panting sister-in-law, reaches the peak of her talent in an impressive characterization, and to which Philip Merivale and Mary Morris contribute their engaging and human talents. I recommend a study of the lighting to art theater directors; Mr. Belasco has something to teach them here.

Here's the Worst

"Pickwick," at the Empire, is the dry bones of Dickens without the gravy of his episodic comicality. You get plenty of plot, reverentially and scrupulously done; but you don't get Mr. Bob Sawyer or Mrs. Leo Hunter, upon whose unctious ghosts the scalpel has descended. The lack is partially atoned for by a magnificant performance, uttered in velvety roars by Bruce Winston as Buzfus, and the really charming Sam Weller of Charles McNaughton. The Pickwick of John Cumberland is "cuts"—and not very bearable therefore.

"The Garden of Eden", adapted from the German by Avery Hopwood and at the Selwyn, is the worst play from every viewpoint of taste and integrity, that I have seen in 30 years of playgoing. The verbena loveliness of Miriam Hopkins has been flung on its papier mache dunghill with a managerial gesture that stops short of felony. Equally wasted is the young, bright skill of Douglass Montgomery.

Seeks Divorce

Allegation that his wife induced him to deed her his interest in their property on Silver-st and then ordered him to pack up his clothes and leave home is made by John W. Burris in an answer and cross petition filed in court of common pleas today to the suit for divorce recently brought by Mrs. Burris.

Through his attorneys, Mouser, Young & Mouser, the husband asks that he be granted a decree of divorce and that his property rights be properly adjusted.

Burris also charges that his wife made life unpleasant for him by nagging and quarrelsome tactics and that she refused to cook for him. They have been living apart, he states, since he left home in compliance with her orders.

Mr. and Mrs. Burris were married in Columbus on March 20, 1920, and have no children. The husband states that he is a section foreman and has been in the employ of the Erie Railroad Co. 33 years.

FIRE CHIEF PLEASED WITH CO-OPERATION

Prevention Week Proves Successful in Marion; Loss Small This Month

With but one fire so far this month, and that with only a loss of a few dollars, Fire Chief McFarland this morning expressed himself as well pleased with the co-operation being given by citizens in general in the observance of fire prevention week.

That their has been co-operation on the part of citizens is the firm belief of the chief who pointed out that never in former years has this season of the year, been attended by so few fires.

With the coming of cool weather when furnaces are lighted and gas stoves installed, it has not been uncommon in the last years to have at least one and sometimes two calls a day. Uncleaned flues and the accumulation of rubbish during the summer, being responsible for a large number of the calls.

That the good record continues at least until after next week is the hope of the chief as a check is made by the Fire Prevention Association of the week preceeding fire prevention week, of the week itself and the week following to determine the good accomplished by the observance of the week.

During the preceding week and fire prevention week last year, the department responded to four calls with a fire loss of $72 while during the week following, there were five calls with a fire loss of $500.

SECOND SUIT FOR DIVORCE IS FILED

Mrs. Alice Guthery Again Files Action After First Is Withdrawn

Suit for divorce was brought in the court of common pleas today by Alice Guthery against Damon Guthery, a decree being sought on grounds of gross neglect and extreme cruelty. The plaintiff also asks for restoration of her maiden name, Alice Copeland, and requests a court order barring the husband from dower rights in the wife's property.

This is the second suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Guthery in the local court, the first action having been dismissed at request of the plaintiff several months ago.

The petition relates that Mr. and Mrs. Guthery were married on Oct. 4, 1916, and have no children. It states that for many years the husband has been cold and indifferent and lacking in affection. His treatment of Mrs. Guthery, it is alleged, has at times become harsh and cruel.

Returns to Home

In 1923, the petition states, this conduct culminated in Mrs. Guthery being struck by her husband.

The plaintiff says that when the defendant promised to pursue a different course, she resumed the marital relationship and lived with him for a time. The former unpleasantness again developed, however, and finally ended in separation, the petition says. This was two years ago, the wife states, and since that time she has resided with her parents with the husband contributing nothing to her support.

As a result of her marital experiences, she has undergone mental suffering and her health has been impaired, the plaintiff alleges.

Hayes Thompson is attorney for the plaintiff.

BUILDING ON UPWARD TREND

Eleven Permits Issued for Construction Here During Week

With 11 permits calling for the construction of new buildings of an estimated value of $8,220, issued during the week, building activities in Marion showed a substantial increase over the preceding week when but eight permits were issued providing for new building of an estimated value of $865.

An office building of an estimated value of $6,000 was included in the permits issued during the week. There were also seven permits for garages of an estimated value of $1,045 and additions to dwellings of an estimated value of $1,100.

Contractors and dealers in building supplies express themselves as being fairly well satisfied with the building activities in the city so far this year. Business, they say has been good, especially in view of the fact that there has not been any very big jobs so far this year. Practically all of the building has been confined to dwellings and garages and other small buildings.

Construction of the Palace theatre building at W. Center and Campbell-sts, it is believed by builders, will bring additional building in that section of the city. According to reports it is the plan of the theater company to complete only the basement and foundation of the new theatre building this fall, the construction of the building proper to start with the coming of good weather in the spring.

COLORED MAN HELD TO JURY UNDER BOND

Enters Plea of Guilty To Possessing Burglar Tools; Taken to Jail

Herbert Wickett, colored, was held to the grand jury under $200 bond by Judge W. R. Martin in municipal court this morning when he pleaded guilty to possessing burglar tools. He was unable to provide the bond and was taken to the county jail.

Wickett, was arrested with several others by the Hocking Valley detectives in the railroad yards, Thursday afternoon and when searched at police headquarters a "jimmie," a long screwdriver and a pair of plyers were found in his possession. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of having burglar tools in his possession when arraigned before Judge Martin yesterday afternoon but changed his plea this morning.

Harry Hart, another member of the gang gathered in by railroad police, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing coal and was given a fine of $15 and costs which was suspended on condition that he leave the city. All others arrested were ordered out of the city by the court.

STORE BURGLARIZED

$2 in Money and Cigarets Taken; Latter Recovered

A patrolman passing the candy store conducted by F. M. Smith at 617 Silver-st early this morning, discovered a glass broken in the front door. The proprietor was notified and an investigation revealed a visit by burglars.

A carton of 800 cigarets and $2 in money was taken. The cigarets were later found near one of the tanks at the Sinclair Oil station on Silver-st. Why the cigarets should have been abandoned is one of the mysteries surrounding the robbery.

Scientifically Planted Potato Patch of Tenth of Acre Yields 35 Bushels

ALTHOUGH the potato crop in this section of Ohio is reported to be considerably below the average, a notable exception is found at the farm of S. B. Stowe in Grand Prairie Township, where a small garden patch yielded an output which is believed to be close to a record-breaker.

The patch, covering only about one-tenth of an acre, produced 35 bushels of high-grade potatoes of the Sir Walter Raleigh variety.

As definite evidence of the remarkable crop, Mr. Stowe yesterday weighed 25 of the potatoes and found that they totaled 37 pounds, an average of one pound and 12 ounces each.

Three Factors

This unusual gardening achievement, during a season when the general potato output is considerably below par, resulted chiefly from three factors, Mr. Stowe stated today.

First, use of the soil for a crop of sweet clover prepared the ground for planting of potatoes.

As the second preliminary for assuring satisfactory results, the potatoes were sprouted prior to planting by laying them out in the open about May 1, getting the benefit of the sunlight until June 9, when the planting took place. In this way the seed potatoes were thoroughly sprouted before being placed underground.

The third factor contributing largely to success of the undertaking consisted of liberal use of a good fertilizer and careful and diligent cultivation.

Few Bugs This Year

Little spraying was necessary, Mr. Stowe reports, as there was an unusual scarcity of potato bugs this year.

The crop was grown in clay loam soil and was planted in five short rows, making a truck patch about the size of the ordinary garden plot found on many city properties.

Mr. Stowe, who resides at 350 Summit-st and was formerly employed as Marion County farm agent, stated today that a survey shows that the potato output in Marion County and surrounding territory is below normal in quality as well as in volume.

In Morrow County, where there is usually an exceptionally good potato crop, this year's production is only about half of the normal record, Mr. Stowe says.

Post-Tribune Dedicates New Plant and Office Building in Indiana City

Former Marion men are managers and chief owners of the Gary Post-Tribune, which dedicated its new plant and office building at Gary, Ind., this week and in observance of the event printed a special issue which included an eight-page rotogravure section containing views of the structure and photographs of the staff members.

Henry Burgess Snyder, the editor, and J. Ralph Snyder, publisher, were formerly associated with their father, the late H. R. Snyder, in publication of the Marion Mirror, which later became the Marion Tribune.

Following sale of their Marion publication, Mr. Snyder and his sons moved in 1912 to Gary, then a comparatively small place which was destined to become one of the country's leading steel industry centers. They took possession of the Gary Post and from a small beginning have developed one of Indiana's most important newspapers. The Post was later consolidated with the Gary Tribune.

H. R. Snyder, former head of the enterprise, died March 2, 1925. He was a newspaperman of the old school and was successful in the management of several publications. He published a paper in Dayton prior to coming to Marion.

HERE'S MORE ABOUT

BOAT ACCIDENT

ferry, and a Baltimore & Ohio tugboat. Additional boats were swung overside and joined in the search for members of the freighter's crew.

The Paris picked up eight men.

The first personal stories of the survivors were given by Ingolf Anderson and Axel Lundell, two of the seamen who were picked up by the American Legion and landed at the South Ferry slip.

Thrown From Bunks

The ship was anchored and many of the crew were sleeping when they were thrown from their bunks, the sailors said. Immediately water began running into the engine room.

They rushed on deck, where they found that several of the life-boats had been thrown from their davits. The ship settled so rapidly that it was impossible to launch any of the remaining boats and many jumped overboard.

A Staten Island ferry boat bound from New York, picked up a life boat containing 13 men and landed them at the South Ferry terminal. These survivors said that another boatload was picked up by a ferry bound for St. George. These two were the only boats launched, they said.

Some of the crew who were landed at South Ferry were treated by ambulance doctors for submersion.

These included: Ingolf Anderson, Axel Lundell, Axel Wettergren, Liel Kellowold, Sörin Laval, Oscar Peterson, Hans Sorinsen, Birger K. Johannsen, Ole Lind and Axel Hasele.

To Continue Later

Among the 360 passengers on the Paris who rushed from their staterooms and witnessed the tragedy were Maurice Tillier, director of the French line, and Leopold Stokowski, of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

After assisting in the rescue work, the Paris picked up her boats, swung about and returned to her pier. It was said she would continue to Cherbourg after minor repairs were made.

The Paris, built at St. Nazaire, France, in 1921, is owned by Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. She is 735 feet long, measures 85 feet across the beam and is of 34,569 tons registry.

The Besseggen is a steel freighter built in Osaka, Japan, in 1916. She is 305 feet long, measures 43 feet across the beam, and is of 3,143 tons registry. She is owned by the Jens Folkman's Reredi Aktiengesellschaft and her home port is Skien, Norway.

struction of her plane and its abandonment after it had caught fire.

They explained that they came down approximately 380 miles northwest of the Island of Fayal, one of the Azores, due principally to the failure of the pressure pump on their plane.

Highest officialdom of the islands, thousands of residents and even peasants from far back in the hills were on hand at the quay when the Barendrecht steamed into port.

Also on hand to meet the daring girl flier was another of her sex who has gone in for aviation on a transatlantic scale. This was Lillie Dillenz, the Viennese actress who has covered 900 miles of her transoceanic flight from Europe to the United States as a passenger on the Junkers plane which arrived here from Lisbon.

It was understood here that Miss Elder and Haldeman will proceed tomorrow to Lisbon and from there go to Paris, their original destination.

Agents and messages from various steamship companies were here offering the fliers free transportation to either side of the Atlantic.

Rain fell in torrents while the Barendrecht was docking.

The civil governor, the British and Dutch consuls and officials of the American Cable Co. went on board to greet Miss Elder and the pilot of her machine.

Both Miss Elder and the pilot, George Haldeman, were on deck when the officials got aboard.

Miss Elder spoke a few words, saying she was overjoyed with the public interest in her adventure and that she was so overwhelmed by cablegrams and radiograms that she could not attempt to answer all of them.

Captain Goos, who was standing by, said that he had sighted the plane and, realizing from its actions that it was in difficulty, made arrangements to give help. It was the result of his maneuvers that the plane was able to come down alongside the ship. A life boat was launched and the occupants of the "American Girl" were picked up at once.

Miss Elder estimated that the distance flown was approximately 2,000 miles.

The plane landed all right and was in good condition except for the broken oil feed pipe and a hot motor.

An attempt was made to save the machine. Ropes were lowered from a freight derrick and were made fast to the disabled plane. The engine began to hoist away and the plane rose from the water, bumping against the side of the tanker. In a moment there was an explosion, a burst of flame and then the plane was afire. The blazing remnants were dropped back into the water.

On account of an accumulated amount of gasoline on the deck of the Barendrecht, the skipper got his ship away from the flaming wreckage as soon as possible.

The two fliers plan to leave Monday upon the mail boat Lima for Lisbon.

A home economics breakfast will be served Friday morning at the hotel with Mrs. Ella Mae Ives, in charge. Miss Ives will give a talk on meal planning and meal time spirit. She is home economics chairman of the state Child Conservation League and resides in Columbus. Mrs. G. F. Miller, of the Palmer School, Detroit, state educational chairman, will conclude the breakfast with a talk. The closing session of the convention will be held in the ballroom with a talk by Miss Belle Greve, of the state welfare department, Columbus, and music by Benjamin Gilmore.

The program of the Child Conservation league is outlined four directions, moral, mental, spiritual and physical. The work begins with the study of the infant and continues until the child has reached his majority and throughout his life. All the circles are interested in carrying on philanthrophic work and locally the organization is recognized among the leading civic bodies interested in community betterment and welfare. Members of the Marion circle contribute to a fund for providing milk for undernourished children, and a kindergarten has been established in one of the local churches.

Nature talks, story hours, library contributions, baby clinics, Christmas donations, better pictures, supervised playgrounds, sewing classes, a movement toward more sanitary dairies, the placing of health posters are some of the work carried on by the different circles throughout the state.

CIVIL ENGINEERS PASS THROUGH CITY

Delegation of 75 Makes Brief Stop at Harding Memorial During Trip

Automobiles carrying approximately 75 representatives of the American Society of Civil Engineers passed through Marion late yesterday afternoon on a tour over highways in this section of the state, the route extending from O'Shaughnessy's dam, near Columbus, to this city.

The engineers made a brief stop at the Harding Memorial prior to their return trip to Columbus, which was made over the Marion-Columbus-rd. Grover C. Snyder of this city, division engineer of the state highway department, was in the party, which included prominent civil engineers from various parts of the country.

The tour was made for the purpose of giving the engineers an opportunity to inspect several types of highway located along the route.

At O'Shaughnessy's dam the engineers formed two groups, one making the highway inspection and the other going to Delaware to inspect the sewage disposal plant there. T. S. Cathers, Marion's city engineer, and F. G. Browne, superintendent of the local sewage disposal plant, accompanied the group going to Delaware. The original plan was to come to Marion to inspect the local plant, which is generally regarded as one of the best in the country, but lack of time necessitated cancellation of that part of the schedule.

The inspection trips were a part of the program of the fall meeting of the engineering society, which was held this week in Columbus, closing today.

Why a Warship?

We noted in Friday's despatches a hint that the navy might send a cruiser or destroyer to carry Ruth Elder and George Haldeman, the aviators rescued from the American Girl by the tanker, Barenbrecht, to such destination as they may decide to go.

Despite the fact that Secretary Wilbur announced that the transoceanic aviation season was closed and that the navy would no longer attempt to convoy aeroplanes or make a business of sending out warships to retrieve shipwrecked aviators from the sea, we believe that search for the crew of the American Girl would have been made just the same had not their rescue at sea been reported. And such is the aviation enthusaism at present, that he probably would not have been censured for so doing, but would have received censure had he not done so.

But the two were rescued. They were picked up and are being carried to, if they have not already arrived at, the Azores, which is a port of call for various vessels and from which they may go on to Europe or return home.

Why under such circumstances the navy should send a warship to bring them home, save to hasten the dating up of the two with some motion picture or vaudeville enterprise or some newspaper syndicate or magazine is utterly beyond our comprehension.

The attempted flight, we are told, was for the glory of achievement. Possibly so, but it will probably result in an engagement with a big monetary feature in connection therewith. Those who financed the attempt should be permitted to look after the return trip, whether it be immediate, or after a stay in Europe.

National Civic League Program.

This newspaper has so long been committed to the dry cause that it may be said that "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." We firmly believe in temperance and sobriety and we are utterly out of sympathy with the liquor evil in all its ramifications. But these facts do not estop us from combating lawbreaking by dry or wet or opposing any and all proposals designed to weaken the law, arouse antagonism against it or bring it into reproach, whether such proposals be made by wet or dry.

It has been our position in the past, and is now, that it is better that the breaking of one law go unpunished than that one or more laws of equal or greater importance be broken or constitutional rights be trampled upon in the enforcement of it. We are opposed to such practices. And we are just as thoroughly committed to opposition of proposals which, no matter what the real purpose in offering them, may endanger our basic law.

These observations have been called out by the published statement of John B. Hammond, legislative representative of the National Civic league, which is the avowed enemy of the Anti-Saloon league, that it will leave nothing undone to outshine the work of its rival. The Civic league, he says, plans twelve new laws which it expects to get before congress. Its program includes the abolition of the near beer industry in the United States; repeal of the physician's liquor prescription law; strict regulations governing the distribution of industrial alcohol and an act placing a minimum penalty for all violations of the liquor laws, thus taking from the judiciary the right to allow offenders to escape with trifling fines.

Congress also will be asked, he says, to make the abatement law mandatory in both criminal and civil actions. The law does not now permit abatement of a liquor nuisance if its existence is established in a criminal case.

Other proposals are that the law be amended to permit a citizen to maintain injunction and contempt actions against liquor nuisances; that a permanent injunction be allowable and the injunction made mandatory against liquor nuisances, and that a person guilty of maintaining a liquor nuisance may be enjoined from repeating the offense in the same or any other building in United States, replacing the handy law that now allows him to move next door and avoid contempt-of-court action.

We are not enthusiastic over all these proposals, but we could stand for them, but we feel that the league is going too far, when, no matter what the purpose of its program, it champions a law, as it does, to enable arrests for liquor violations to be made in homes without search warrants. Such a proposal is dangerous. The chances are almost infinitely long that it will never become a part of our laws, but there is never any telling what may happen.

We could not imagine a law more vicious that one framed upon this proposal. Let us not be mealy-mouthed about it. It has been demonstrated that there has been in the past and there probably are now liquor law enforcement officers with criminal records. There are many more whose entrance into a respectable home would be an offense against it. Even to propose to turn loose upon the people of the land men of this stamp, duly authorized to enter and search homes without warrant, shows how little respect the Civic league has for the constitutional rights of the citizenship of the land.

We believe we appreciate the purpose of the league in formulating its proposals, but no matter what its purpose, this one is too revolting for contemplation.

The Old Cemetery.

We note that the good ladies of one of our patriotic organizations plan to interest civic organizations as well as the city authorities in the restoration and care of the old cemetery along Quarry street to the east of State.

The plan is a splendid one and it should be carried into execution. More than that, the various organizations of the city and the city itself should take action to bring about the accomplishment sought. The present condition of the cemetery is a disgrace to the city. It would be hard to conceive how it could be much worse. We are glad to commend the initiative shown by the ladies, just as we were glad in the past to commend previous plans to the same end. The trouble is that we have never been given opportunity to record the accomplishment of any of the previous plans.

There is a very capable woman at the head of the present movement, and she is backed by a very worthy and enthusiastic organization. Let us hope that there will be such achievement as to force us to apologize for making reference to former movements along the same line.

THE THUNDERING HERD.

Chill Gives Warning of Disease.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

What is the most widespread and fatal of all acute diseases? What disease is found in all countries and at all seasons—in the tropics, at the poles, everywhere?

These are not questions to test your intelligence. They are asked in order that I may impress upon you the prevalence and seriousness of pneumonia. Pneumonia is this dread disease.

We hold in memory the dreadful epidemic of 1918. For a good many weeks the horror of influenza caused us to forget the war. Neighborhood invasion was more compelling than the events across the water.

But influenza is not a fatal disease. Now you are startled. What do I mean? Uncomplicated influenza is uncomfortable, but not fatal. It becomes fatal when it is complicated by pneumonia. The deaths are due to this and not to influenza.

When we speak of pneumonia we are referring really to two distinct diseases—"lobar pneumonia" and "broncho-pneumonia." The latter is an extention of an inflammation through the bronchial tubes to the air cells of the lungs. This is the form of pneumonia found after influenza, or after simple bronchitis.

But the pneumonia I desire to tell you about today is the other form—lobar-pneumonia. This comes on without warning. It does not start as a cold or influenza. It comes on suddenly and prostrates its victim almost in his tracks.

The scientists classify lobar-pneumonia into four types. But we need not worry our heads about the scientific aspects of the disease. Today we want to learn just the outstanding facts, so as to know how to guard against infection with this serious ailment.

The germ of pneumonia is not thoroughly determined upon, but it is some form of germ life like the "pneumococcus," an agent responsible for other troubles than pneumonia. An abscess of the ear, "pink-eye," tonsilitis, and almost any pus-producing disturbance, may be traced to the pneumococcus. But the worst thing it can do is to cause pneumonia.

The first sign of pneumonia is a chill. So characteristic of the disease is the chill that we may almost say it is not pneumonia unless there has been a chill. It may come on in the night or at any time of day. Without previous notice, the victim is in the grasp of a severe chill.

Fever, cough, pain in the chest and difficult breathing are other symptoms which speedly appear. In a couple of days the coughing brings up sputum stained with blood. "Brick dust sputum," it is called, because it has that color.

In from five to ten days comes the "crisis." The fever drops; the difficult breathing and other symptoms disappear.

If you have a chill or if a member of your family has a chill, the doctor is needed at once. Don't wait "to see what will happen." Let the doctor take charge.

Cleanliness of the hands—frequent washing with soap and water—should be everybody's rule. Pneumonia is undoubtedly a hand-conveyed disease. In any event keep clean. Wash the face with soap and water, cleaning out the front of the nostrils—do this on returning from business.

Keep the health in prime condition. Simple food, exercise, fresh air, sunlight and plenty of sleep—these are rules which will help to avoid pneumonia and all other illnesses.—Copyright, 1927.

Editorial Comment.

FIGHT FILMS.

It was not a crime to attend the Dempser-Tunney fight. It was not a crime to listen in on the blow by blow report over the radio. It is not a crime to send pictures of the fight from Chicago to any other point, or to publish them in a newspaper or other publication. But it is a crime—a crime under federal jurisdiction—to send moving pictures of the fight to any point outside the state of Illinois.

Therein lies a delicious example of the inanity of much professional reform. Unable to stop prize fighting in many states, the reformers turned their pleas toward the federal government, as they have of late years done with increasing frequency. But they were unable to reach fighting itself. The best they ever attained, in fact, was prohibition of the shipment of moving pictures of fights in interstate commerce.

A more futile attempt to attack prize fighting could hardly be imagined, nor one based upon a more fallacious argument. This argument consisted in the assertion that there was something demoralizing in the sight of two pugilists battering each other. It included the notion that the sight of a bloody nose was injurious to the spectator. Of course, nothing could be more ridiculous. As Robert Lynd, the English essayist, pointed out recently in New Statesmen, the sight of a bloody combat could harm no moral person, because it is essentially revolting.

But the uplifters who were out to save the public from being demoralized by the vice of prize fighting could not see this. They were as devoid of intelligence as they were of respect for the rights and tastes of others. Had they been intelligent, they would have circulated films of the bloodiest fights. That might have done prize fighting some real harm in the public's eyes.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A COMMENDABLE RESIGNATION.

The mayor of Indianapolis, indicted, tried and convicted for an offense directly concerned with his office, still clings desperately to that office and shuffles his appointive subordinates around so as to get his wife in position to become his successor if the office which he disgraces shall be wrenched out of his own grasp.

One of his appointees, indicted, but not yet tried, for an alleged illegal act not concerned with his official conduct, saw the matter in a different light and immediately resigned, though protesting his innocence of the charge against him. We shall let him state his own reasons:

"I know that if this indictment had been pending against me at the time I was appointed I would not have thought of accepting, and I do not believe that the citizens of this city would have felt that it was a proper appointment under such circumstances. They could rightfully have said that surely there could be found a man to fill this important position who is not under indictment. If under an indictment I would not be a proper person to appoint, then, in my judgment, under an indictment I am not a proper person to continue to hold the office."

One can have for this man a degree of respect utterly impossible in the case of Mayor Duvall, since the mayor has shown a callous lack of respect for himself, for his family, which he has dragged into connection with his own wrongdoing, and for the city of Indianapolis, which had honored him by entrusting its highest official position to his keeping.—Columbus Dispatch.

Vagrant Verse.

FALL WEATHER.

The sky is like a nest of bowls,
Each of a different hue:
Some, pewter; some, dull porcelain:
And then there's one that's blue,
Delft blue, and puffed with little clouds,
And splashed with elm-leaf gold,
And daubed with gracile, scarlet sprays
Of maples, grandly old.
The weather-maker brings this out
To use all through the fall,
And days he mixes in that bowl
Are quite the best of all!

—Violet Allyn Storey.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Quicker take-offs, landing in smaller spaces, stability during engine trouble, greater knowledge of the weather and improved facilities for "riding" it are the problems to be solved if aviation is to come into its own in the commerce of the world. This is the opinion of Guggenheim, head of the foundation which is spending much money for the promotion of aeronautics. He is right in believing that the time has come to concentrate on these problems rather than give so much attention to stunts and spectacular ocean flights. There is still a lot of shop and laboratory work to be done if flying is to reach its real possibilities.

Methodist preachers, meeting in various conferences this fall, show a practical turn of mind. They talk about a living wage and it is well they should. In an Illinois conference $2,000 and a house are proposed as the minimum compensation. Helpful preaching calls for a great deal of intellectual equipment, to say nothing about moral fitness. Education and training cost real money—lots of it. Nobody has a right to expect good preaching from a man who can't meet the interest on his loans. Two thousand and a house are little enough.

Comes now George K. Spoor, pioneer motion picture producer, who has an invention to eliminate the flatness of pictures. Pictures, if the Spoor invention is successful, will have depth. We marvel at the inventions of the modern age. They are still, many of them, in crude form. Radio is imperfect. Aviation is in its raw beginning. Motion pictures are filled with opportunities for improvement. Don't be discouraged. There's still a heavy demand for genius—and hard work.

Chicago reports that men in the building trades are averaging more than $1.50 an hour. Men getting the wages that are common today make poor audiences for soap-boxers. Go to Europe and see what men and women are paid and how they live. If you have any doubt about America as a good place to live in, get the facts.

All the blame for motor car accidents must not be put on the drivers. County commissioners, township supervisors—road makers and managers everywhere—should be called upon to eliminate deep, wide, and unnecessary ditches. Many roads which are a perpetual danger could be made fool proof. Making a road smooth enough and wide enough is not doing all that ought to be done. How about the big ditch? How about spending a reasonable amount of money for protective fences? Give the driver a chance.

Dinner Stories.

A boastful American had been admitted to heaven and was talking "splurgingly" about Niagara falls. Some one near him laughed aloud.

"Maybe," said the talkative one from the United States, "you don't think 8,000,000 cubic feet of water pass over them every second. Maybe you don't think that is a lot of water? Might I ask your name, sir?"

The one who had laughed aloud said softly: "Certainly. It's Noah!"

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. M'INTYRE.

New York, Oct. 15 — A prowl about the shores of Manhasset bay and Hempstead harbor probably uncovers more celebrities than the entire lengths of Broadway and Fifth avenue. This is the theatrical and literary colony of Great Neck—called Goitre by some crackers.

Along one shore will be found the homes of Raymond Hitchcock, Eddie Cantor, Arthur Hopkins, Gene Buck, Clarence Buddington Kelland, Jack Hazzard, Neysa McMein, Jack Cowl, Max Pilgman and Leslie Howard. Most Great Neckers—a half hour from Broadway—live there the year around.

They thrill to this slightly remote rusticity. A stranger walking along the quiet street may see one of his favorite figures hoeing in the garden, sprinkling the lawn, painting the garage, cutting grass or performing other simple tasks.

On the other shore side live F. Scott Fitzgerald, Lew Fields, Herbert B. Swope, Ring Lardner, George Cohan, Tom Meighan, Edgar Selwyn, Ernest Truex, Sam Harris, Ed Wynn, Frank Craven, Ernest Glendenning, Frances Alda, Jesse Livermore, Tad and Quinn Martin.

Across the sound on either shore of the Hempstead harbor the estates are a little monotony. Here reside W. R. Coe, Irving Berlin, father-in-law, C. Oliver Iselin, Solomon Guggenheim, Vincent Astor, and many other with heavy purses. The late Marcus Loew lived there, also.

Most of these residents have backyard bathing beaches—known as outdoor baths to the Despite their apparent affluence, the villa touch is pronounced. The local barbershop is the meeting-place. Every home is equipped with a radio. And people rock on the front porch of evenings.

Croquet grounds are numerous and pool checker games are a common diversion. A census recently showed ninety per cent. of the Great Neckers are of small-town origin.

They receive a verbal plop on the beezer resembling the resounding skusb of the flying brick in the comic strip. The other evening one whose record of sinking liner did not achieve a hero medal, became particularly annoying. He challenged Mr. Lackeye to billiards, chess and this is what said wound up with: "I can beat you at anything you suggest."

"Doubtless. Including a race for two boats," drawled Mr. Lackeye.

Broadway is now intent on curbing another politic gyppery, now that some progress has been made against theater-ticket and cover gouges. The guns are aimed this time at table water prices in cafes and night clubs. These bottled beverages cost an average of six cents a bottle. They are sold anywhere from sixty cents to $1.25. In many hotels prices rise after 4 o'clock when the high tide demand is heavier. The method is simple in the effort to reduce the price. Patrons are mixing highballs in plain water. An organization known as the Plain Water club is anyway, having more fun with the idea. But if the cafe and hotel men can not see the joke.

Views of Those in Public Eye

CLAUDE AUGUSTUS SWANSON.

Claude A. Swanson was born at Swanville, Pittsylvania county, Virginia, March 31, 1862. He served as a member of congress from the Fifth Virginia district from 1893 to 1905 and was reelected for the following term but resigned. In 1906 Swanson was elected governor of the state. In 1910 he was appointed United States senator for an unexpired term and has served in the upper house of congress ever since.

Senator Swanson as a Democrat naturally opposes a protective tariff, but yet he believes that France has made a mistake in taking the method she has in opposing ours. He says:

"While France has a right to protect itself against our high prohibitive tariff, which is alike prejudicial to French and American consumers, the methods of France in doing so have been neither wise nor far-seeing, and persisted in, might produce friction between the two countries. By refusing to the United States the most-favored-nation treaty, France has put itself in the attitude of discriminating in favor of Germany, a former enemy, against the United States, a former friend. France's position is an inconsistent one, and the high protectionists there now dominate France as inconsistently as the high protectionists who dominate now in the United States.

"The high protectionists for years have insisted that treaties of reciprocity must necessarily accompany the high protective tariff in order to eliminate the hardships and injustices. Thus we had the Blaine and McKinley reciprocity treaties earnestly favored by high protectionists and opposed as impracticable and impossible of execution without producing international difficulties and ill-will by those who favored liberal trade relations between nations.

"The policy of reasonable tariffs with special reciprocity treaties has been completely vindicated and the department of state may be congratulated that it has at last accepted the doctrine that general favored-nation treaties are the only ones that should be made and that special reciprocity treaties, so long advocated for many years, are impracticable and have failures.

"France, if wise, will not refuse to extend to the United States a most-favored-nation treaty and the extreme protectionists there will soon learn, like the extreme protectionists here, that fair and reasonable tariffs and treaties which permit fair and prosperous trade between the nations, are preferable to prohibitive rates, and that the only way to have trade relations can be maintained without introducing international ill-will is by most-favored-nation treaties which accord equality of treatment to all."

The Curse of Covetousness

A CHAT WITH SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS

The Golden Text

BY DR. ALVIN E. BELL

WHEN God said "Thou shalt not covet" he meant thereby to guard us against a whole brood of such sins as jealously, theft, perjury and murder, into which King Ahab fell when he looked with covetous eyes upon the vineyard of Naboth, his next door neighbor. His covetous heart stifled all the joy he might have had out of all the riches of the ivory palace he owned because it hankered after what his neighbor owned.

Thus to this day happiness consists not in the abundance of the things that we possess, but in the spirit of contentment with which we look upon our possessions and those of others about us. How unlike a king Ahab was, lying there upon his couch pouting like a spoiled child because Naboth's sentiment would not permit him to sell to the king the place his fathers through many generations had called home.

Ahab is the picture of contemptible weakness and wickedness combined, while Jezebel, his wife, is the personification of strength prostituted to wickedness, as she shames the king with his weakness, and sets her iron will to work through perjury and murder to bring about Naboth's death that the king may have the coveted vineyard for his garden. She accomplishes her purpose, or thinks she does, and proudly announces the success of her scheme, and the king arises and goes to view his ill-gotten possession.

Jezebel's policy might be expressed in that popular saying, "It's not what you do, but what you get away with." But popular as that policy is now and has been in all ages, there is a law of God that antedates and takes precedence over it. That law is expressed in the golden text of this lesson: "Be sure your sin will find you out." It is otherwise expressed in the words, "The wages of sin is death," and "The way of the transgressor is hard." Those who defy these ancient laws have yet to learn that "sorrow tracketh wrong as echo follows song—on, on, on."

It took 20 years for the guilt of Ahab and Jezebel to ripen into judgment, but it came about exactly as Elijah foretold it that day he confronted the king in the vineyard he never enjoyed after he got it: "In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine." Ahab thought he was "getting away with" his sin, but just then Elijah blocked the way and rebuked him, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Thus his guilty conscience made him cry out. And Elijah flashed back the reply, "I have found thee: because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord."

Ahab thought he was getting a bargain—a vineyard as a present. But the price he paid was his kingdom, and his own soul and the souls of his children after him. He had literally sold himself for a parcel of ground. And what a fool's bargain it was he made. But others are doing the same thing today, and need to ponder the Lord Jesus Christ's question, "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Ahab paid too high a price for Naboth's vineyard when he "sold himself" for it. It was a fool's bargain, yet a bargain many so-called "hard headed business men" are driving every day.

(The International Uniform Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 16 is I Kings chapter 21, the subject being "Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard," and the Golden Text Numbers 32:23 "Be sure your sin will find you out.")

BRETHREN PLANS MUSIC PROGRAM

A program of music will be presented at the Church of the Brethren at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night in place of the regular church service, it was announced by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Shively, today. In the morning Reverend Shively will preach on the subject, "The Place of Sacred Music in Worship."

The Supreme Sacrifice

A SERMONETTE

BY GEORGE WHITLOCK
Pastor, Wesley M. E. Church

"He Poured Out His Soul"—Isaiah 53:12.

1—Its Power

THE traditional Hill Calvary is a rugged eminence, just without the city walls, and almost directly opposite the Damascus Gate. It is of broken and scarified limestone formation, differing not a bit from other hills about it. Strange feelings however surge within the soul as from its rugged height one surveys the Temple Area, the Via Dolorosa and the heedless throngs of its various highways. To this place serious minds of all ages have come, persuaded that in some mysterious way, the destiny of mankind is undoubtedly associated.

2—Its Need

The great dramatist drew the portrait of humanity's need with a true hand when he caused the doctor in Macbeth to be addressed: "Canst thou minister to a mind diseased? Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow." "Cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart." To which the wise doctor replied: "More needs she the 'divine' than the physician."

The inescapable lesson is, that to cleanse humanity's stain, something more powerful than "Beautiful Ethics" is needed. Calvary supplies that need.

3—Its Principle

The success of all worthy enterprise is foundationed upon this law of "vicarious sacrifice." St. Paul "poured out his soul." Asia Minor heard. St. Peter poured out his soul. Rome heard. To advance any great cause, some one must bear.

4—Its Challenge

Ghandi says "India would be at your feet tomorrow if Christians followed Christ.' In spite of our imperfection Hindooism is giving away to Christ. Mohammedanism, the outstanding enemy recedes before the cross. Do we appreciate the cause sufficiently to pay the price? Our fathers did.

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

THE World series and the Star's cooking school are over, the pumpkins are being garnered and if are to give any heed to the signs of the times, winter is lurking about two good jumps ahead. Why, it was only this week some one asked me if I had purchased my Christmas cards? Well if it just must be we might as well take it graciously and gracefully and decide it isn't so bad after all. It really gives every one a chance to strut their pet hankering to do something different after pursuing the even tenor of their ways for a period of several months, and with what vim and vigor they hop to it. Did you ever notice along about this time how the hand that pushes the electric sweeper takes on new cunning and the first thing you know the davenport is shifted to a neutral corner of the room and your pet corn collides with a leg of the piano as you grasp the arm of a chair parked in your line of march to the light switch. And who is there who would deny she of the flapper age an opportunity to rave about her favorite football hero, and when but through the winter could she do it? Imagine trying to thrill over a helmeted, legging-ed and sweater-ed Adonis with the mercury playing around 95 in the shade. And what of the Adonis himself? It appearances or rather mein, count for anything, his wedding day will have nothing on his days on the football field for importance. And then, why should it? If he's good enough he can stay in the game for a whole season and when he's married his parking time in the limelight is just about long enough to permit him to see his hands get back to their normal size and his knees quit knocking together.

SOME of us have been told we like to hear ourselves talk and I really wonder if we do. You don't have to listen in on some one else's conversation, just check up on your own and that of an understanding friend and see. Are you one of those "do you get me" "if you know what I mean," "see" souls? "Her hat was blue and trimmed in some of those new ornaments, 'if you know what I mean;'" or "I made my dress with panels coming down like this, 'see.'"

TODAY'S woman who sprinkles a handful of bath salts in her tub or touches the tips of her ears with a little perfume is only succumbing to the vanity, moderately, (for which we should be truly thankful), with which primitive females were imbued. They went in heavy for perfumery in the good old days. Several thousand years ago the dames making ready for a first dance spent hours covering their whole bodies with a perfume paste which they left on for a while night before the shin dig, and peeled it off the next day leaving their bodies clean and fragrant. According to those who claim to know, men as well as women vied with each other in seeing who could perfume themselves with the heaviest scents, and the more perfume the more happiness and satisfaction. Sheba was laden with much perfume as well as spices when she started out to make a hit with Solomon and Cleopatra saw to it that even the sails of her barge gave out a subtle scent when she and the asp set out to do Mark Antony. Women weren't the only ones obsessed with this fatal weakness for fine oils and scents for history records that old man Nero, when he wanted to throw a real feed and fiddle fest squandered thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars on odors alone.

Meditations OF A Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

And Still We Love Them—

A friend is most entertaining when he is lively and witty—a lover, when he is deadly serious.

A man may be parted from the woman he loves and separated from the woman he marries; but he can no more be torn free from the woman who AMUSES him than a puppy from a pet bone.

There are pet dogs who follow every friendly whistle and men who respond to every woman's challenge. Eternal vigilance is the price of their fidelity—but it's scarcely worth the price.

The first kiss must have been discovered by some prehistoric man and joyfully adopted as the safest, most non-committal and most convincing way of answering a woman's questions.

A "clear conscience" is what a man has, after the headache or the heart-affair has worn off, and he has confessed as much or as little to the woman he loves as he knows she will find out anyhow.

There are times, these days, when a woman feels that it would be easier to have another woman STEAL her husband than to have all of them continually "borrowing" him.

To a man, all life is a fascinating adventure—an exciting "game"; and he can squeeze more joy out of one hour of it than a woman can extract in a year.

A man is not actually past his youth until the women stop thinking of him as a good fellow, and begin thinking of him as a good catch or a "good thing."

Dividing the "sheep" from the "goats"—the good from the bad—it has to be done sooner or later, even with furniture. So we do it. We don't have any "goats" in our store. When you come in, and we hope you will, you will find only furniture in good taste from which to choose. And that, after all, is pleasanter than wasting a lot of time on furniture you'd never want to buy. At least we feel that way at Schaffner's.

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "MONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," etc.

Read This First

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who has not lived with her mother for nine years. The family consists of MRS. JEROME, the invalid, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY down town afternoons.

In the flat below the Jeromes' flat lives young TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman, who wants her to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is just across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye hires Millie as his secretary and becomes blindly infatuated with her. Sally is heartsick and jealous.

Beau and Millie spend most of their earnings on themselves, borrow money from Mrs. Jerome whenever she has it, but never have enough to satisfy their many wants. Sally practically maintains the home with occasional help from her mother or Beau, or a loan from her aunt, EMILY JEROME. Aunt Emily is giving up school teaching to turn her old home into a way-side inn, serving chicken dinners, and wants Sally to go into business with her. But Sally is so short of money that she is afraid to give up her work with Mr. Peevey, where she is sure of $21 a week, little as that is.

Beau gets $110 from Ted Sloan by means of two bad checks and Ted threatens to turn him over to the police. Sally borows the money from Mr. Peevey with which to pay Ted. But when she turns it over to Beau he does not pay him, but uses the money to elope with his fiancee, MABEL WILMOT. Beau and Mabel start borrowing from Sally almost the first day they are married, although both of them are working. One of Mr. Jerome's checks comes, and Mrs. Jerome promises Millie half of it, a hundred dollars, for new fall clothes. The other hundred she promises to give Beau and Mabel for a wedding present, but they manage to coax the whole check from her. Millie learns of it one night when she and Sally return home in John Nye's car, which he has lent to Millie during his absence from town. Millie dies into a tantrum and collapses on the floor.

Now Go on with the Story

CHAPTER XXVIII

BUT Sally was sure that her mother was wrong. For she had seen Millie in tantrums before, and they never had been like this. They had been violent storms of weeping, violent stamping of feet and pounding of tables with hard little fists.

Now there was a note in Millie's sobbing that was more like pain than fury, and as Sally flew to her to lift her up from the floor she began to moan.

"I'm dying—oo-o-o-o-o—" Her voice ended in a sharp little shriek of agony. Sally could almost believe what she said as she looked at her.

Her face, that had been white enough a few moments before, was a gray mask now and her eyes were turned up, showing the whites.

"Millie" Sally whispered, sick with sudden terror. "What's wrong?" What on earth could have happened to make her look like this, she wondered.... And all in that minute, too!

"Get Dr. Ambleside," Sally said to her mother with stiff lips. "Tell him to rush!"

She lifted Millie's small, writhing figure to Mrs. Jerome's wide, soft bed, and began to strip off her soft, silk sports dress, and her stockings and shoes.

And while she walked, Millie never stopped her groans, and never once stopped turning and twisting in her pain. Perspiration—cold as raindrops—came out of her soft flesh.

Once she put her hand to her side and tried to say something. But her power to speak seemed to be gone. After a second she went on moaning like an animal in pain.

"The doctor will be here in a little while" panted Mrs. Jerome coming back from the hall. "Oh, dear Lord, what can he the matter with her? Do you think it's some kind of fit—because she got so angry?"

Sally shook her head. "Anger wouldn't make her sick like this," she half-whispered, although Millie did not seem to hear anything that was going on around her. She was lying perfectly still now, her face almost hidden in the plump pillows that were piled three deep at the head of her mother's bed.

"She's in some kind of terrible pain. I think it's in her side," she went on her eyes on the title of a book that lay on Mrs. Jerome's bedside table.

"When Love Is Kind" was the foolish title, and for one fleeting instant Sally forgot Millie and wondered if love ever was kind to anyone.

"Certainly not to me," she thought briefly, glancing across the room to the silver-gilt clock that stood on the chiffonier between the open windows. Five minutes had passed since her mother had telephoned the doctor. He ought to be on his way by this time. . . . He ought to be here in ten minutes or so, if he had started already.

That ten minutes seemed like a whole lifetime to Sally, sitting like a statue carved out of ivory, on the edge of the bed holding Millie's small hands in hers.

"Her hands—they're hot now," she whispered to Mrs. Jerome, who was standing motionless beside the door. "You come and feel them, Mother."

"Yes, they are hot. Her head's hot, too," Mrs. Jerome agreed. "Maybe she's just having an attack of indigestion like the ones I have. . . . Heaven alone knows what she puts into her stomach, eating around in restaurants night after night the way she does."

"Didn't she have supper here with you and Mr. Nye tonight?" asked Sally frowning. It was always hard for her to say "Mr. Nye" when she always thought of him as "John" in her own secret soul.

"Indeed she did NOT!" snapped Mrs. Jerome. "Sally, what's wrong with you? Can't you remember anything? Didn't I just finish telling you that she ran off somewhere with Nye and left me here without a bite to eat? And I just made up my mind I wouldn't get myself anything if I never ate again! To think of a woman having two grown daughters, and having to get her own meals! Well, I just said to myself I wouldn't, and I didn't! She knew I wasn't feeling well, too, when she rushed out with that man of hers!"

"He was going out of town, and they probably wanted to be alone," Sally began soothingly, but Mrs. Jerome went right on:

"No such thing! She was just too lazy to get a bite of food ready for the three of us! Mr. Nye wanted to buy some things from the delicatessen, but Millie said she wanted to go out, and go out they did! She certainly wins him around her little finger."

The doorbell rang, and she turned heavily and lumbered away to let the doctor in.

As he came quickly and quietly into the lamplit room Millie's eyelids, which had been closed for several moments, fluttered open and she gave him a drowsy glance.

"Pain—here," she mumbled thickly, and laid her hand on her side, just at the line of the hips. "Like two sharp knives—" Then she dropped off into her stupor once more.

With a jerk of his head, Dr. Ambleside ordered both Mrs. Jerome and Sally out of the room.

They stood just outside in the hall, looking at each other but never saying a word, for the next few minutes. Within they could hear the doctor's low voice every now and then, and presently Millie answered him.

Then the door opened and he came out.

"She's better," he said, setting his little black bag down on the floor beside him. "She says the pain has gone, and she's not sure just where it was. She says it was all over her body. I'll be here first thing in the morning, and if she has another attack tonight, call me up. Don't hesitate!"

Then as quickly and quietly as he had come, he was gone.

Mrs. Jerome gave Sally a disgusted look. "Now, isn't that just like a fool doctor?" she exploded, when the door had closed behind him. "Never telling a person what's the matter! She might have gall stones, or appendicitis, or a dozen other things, and we'd never know it!" She opened the bedroom door and went in.

Millie was lying against the pillows, but her face was turned toward them now, and there was a tiny smile on her lips.

Looking at her, Sally knew that no matter what she did that was selfish and cruel and thoughtless, she would always love her—and love her as generously as she always had.

"Why, if anything happened to her I'd die," she said to herself. "And if any girl is going to have John Nye, I'm glad that girl is Millie."

She leaned across the bed and kissed her. Millie smiled wearily up at her once more. Then she turned her face to the wall and went to sleep instantly, as sick people often do.

In the morning, when Sally left for the office, she was better, although she still had a fever.

"Better not give her anything to eat until the doctor gets here," were Sally's parting words to her mother. "You know what they say—'Starve a fever'."

"Good food never hurt anybody," answered Mrs. Jerome, firmly. "But I'm not going near her unless she calls me. She's still cross about my giving that two hundred dollars to poor Beau, and I'm not going in there and let her hector me about it all this livelong day!"

"You're late!" Mr. Peevey greeted Sally when she walked in that day. "You're twelve minutes late!" He frowned down at his huge silver watch.

"I know it, and I'm sorry, but my sister's been sick in bed all morning," the girl answered, tossing her hat up on the books above the mirror. "And I had a little extra work to do."

Mr. Peevey shoved his glasses up on his forehead and glared at her thoughtfully. "That must be quite a family of yours," he said at the end of several minutes. "Are they all invalids?"

"Not quite." Sally grinned at him, showing a flash of white teeth and an adorable dimple. "Look at me! I could lick Dempsey, I'm so husky."

Mr. Peevey gave his inimitable grunt. "Well, hurry up with my lunch," said he. "And I'll let you punish your typewriter, instead. We've getting behind with our letters lately."

It was toward the end of the unseasonably hot afternoon that he began to talk to her again about her own affairs.

"Well, I see our neighbor across the hall is on a little vacation," he said in his tart way, and nodded towards John Nye's office.

The door of it stood open, and within Sally could see Millie's assistant sitting idly at her desk, turning the pages of a magazine.

"Yes," said Sally, with a little catch in her voice. For every time she looked into that office she seemed to see John Nye, as she had seen him that first day standing beside the window, hands in pockets, whistling "High—high—high—up on the hill." How long ago that seemed!

"I thought maybe he and your sister had got married, when they were both gone today," remarked Mr. Peevey. "Sure that isn't what's happened?"

Sally flushed. "I told you my sister was home, sick in bed, Mr. Peevey," she answered, drawing herself up in the most dignified way.

"Oh, that's right—that's right. My mistake!" apologized Mr. Peevey, who remembered perfectly what she had said.

He never had caught Sally in a falsehood yet. But he had not given up hope.

"There's Nye, now—Oh, no, it isn't!" he said, peering out into the hall in his near-sighted way. "I thought it was at first."

Turning sharply, Sally saw a large, familiar figure on the threshold of John Nye's office—Millie's Mr. Davidson.

He was asking in a loud voice for "Miss Millie Jerome." His voice drifted in to where Sally stood beside Mr. Peevey's desk.

"I'll go and tell him that Millie's ill, if you don't mind. He's a friend of hers" she said and went out into the hall.

Peter's Adventures

The Star's Daily Story for Boys and Girls

BY FLORENCE S. VINCENT

NO CAT IS SPITE OF HIS WHISKERS

"G-R-R A Two-Legs!" growled the whiskered face, and scowled at Peter. "So 'tis you who have scared Mrs. Rabbit away from the hole. Well, sir, you didn't count on me! She is a timid little creature, afraid of her shadow, but I am brave and bold, and I'll bite a piece out of your leg, that I will!"

"I'll teach you to drive my neighbors away from their very doorsteps! Not that I care much for Mrs. Rabbit, but she is a pleasant, harmless little body, and it will not hurt me to do her a good turn.

"Besides, I hate the Two-Legs. Mean things—their idea of having a good time is to chase me up a tree! Can't catch me—I too! them every time. But they do their best to make life unpleasant for me.

"Never guessed I'd have a chance to hunt a Human, but here it is, and I'll be as stupid as an Owl not to take it!"

"oGod 'gracious, Cat! What is the matter with you, anyhow?"

Being spoken to so rudely by a perfect stranger to whom he'd done no harm didn't at all please Peter.

"What's all this stalk about hating the humans? You ought to be ashamed of yourself! Don't they feed you and house you and give you a warm seat by the fire?" demanded he.

The words were scarcely out of Peter's mouth when with a leap and a bound the creature was on top of a log, shaking its whiskers in the boy's very face.

"Stuff and nonsense! Seat by the fire, indeed! As if I'd hang around indoors when I might be out in the woods. Cat! Who's a Cat? Pooh! No fun in chasing you! You're too stupid. Dare say you wouldn't even run. I'd only waste my time trying to start something! Look again, Two-Legs! Did you ever know a Cat to have teeth or a tail like mine?"

The creature whirled around and a tail hit Peter on the arm. Then back it switched again, and now teeth were within an inch of the boy's nose. Peter stepped back in alarm.

"Teeth!" exclaimed he. "Why, you need 'em, don't you? And good gracious, some claws! You have a bit of fur on the end of your tail. You're no Cat, that's a fact, though you have whiskers like one. But who in the world are you?"

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

THE PARTY IS RESUMED

ONCE more Eleanor Lincoln rose from the couch where she had rested after her swoon upon hearing the hoot of an owl. But this time Katherine made no objection to her action, had I saw that the little nurse shared my opinion that the young chatelaine of The Larches was herself again, and would suffer neither physical nor mental ill from a return to normalcy.

But our mysterious neighbor did not repeat the blunder of arrogance which she had displayed toward Katherine upon first arousing from her faint. She prefaced her rising with an appealing glance at my kinswoman and spoke quickly, ingratiatingly, when she had gained her feet.

"You think it's all right for me to go back to the veranda, don't you?" she asked with a charm of voice and manner that aimed for her former rudeness. "I'm so ashamed of myself for spoiling the evening this way."

She turned apologetic eyes to me, and I put a reassuring hand upon her arm.

"Please do not give that another thought," I said. "You haven't spoiled the evening at all. If you wish to go into details"—I smiled at her—"we haven't wasted ten minutes. Perhaps we ought to waste more"—I turned inquiringly to Katherine.

"No, I'm sure she's perfectly all right now," Katherine returned, and I resumed my purposely cheery chant.

"So you see you have no reason at all for compunction or embarrassment," I told her. "Suppose we go back to the veranda. I know they are anxious about you."

She put her hands to her hair with an uncertain movement which I promptly interpreted.

"You're not a bit ruffled," I said, "but if you'd like a mirror just come with me."

I preceded her into a recess of the hall, where there was a full-length mirror. With the centuries-old heritage of women, she gave herself a little shake, put back a few straying locks of her bobbed hair, touched up her lips and cheeks and turned back to me.

"Thank you!" she said. "Now I am armed for the fray."

But I knew that she was quaking beneath her brave mask as she walked by my side to the veranda. She possessed keen enough perceptions to realize that the bizarre tale she had told of her childish fright left her auditors but two alternatives. They must disbelieve it or they must mark her down as a neurotic young person with insufficient poise and mentality to overcome her early terror. Either alternative would be anathema to her proud spirit, and, despite my very real annoyance at her for her open ogling of Noel Verlee, I found room in my heart for genuine pity toward her.

Not that she appeared in any need of compassion as she came back to the veranda, perfectly poised and apparently no whit the worse for her swoon. At once she was the centre of anxious inquiries, and it was not until we were all seated once more that I realized Ricky had not returned to the veranda. But it was Miss Lincoln who first voiced a query concerning him.

"Where is Mr. Graham?" she asked, then added with a palpably forced little laugh, "I do hope he isn't still chasing that owl."

"Perhaps he's found it," Mr. George Logan Jackson said, with a little laugh. "If so he's apt to be delayed some time."

GAME RESULTS IN 13-13 SCORE

Marysville and Nelsonville Teams Battle on Even Terms

Marysville, Oct. 15—The Marysville high school pigskin warriors battled the Nelsonville High School team to a 13-13 tie yesterday afternoon, in an interesting game played at Recreation Park, here. Features of the game were a number of spectacular passes by the visitors and a 50-yard run by Edwards, Marysville captain.

The fray started with Marysville winning the toss and choosing to receive. The local played a listless game during the entire first half but succeeded in holding their own and neither team scored.

After a good "priming," Coach Kingsmore sent his men back into the game for the second half. The "priming" seemed to have little effect however as Nelsonville scored a touchdown when the half was only a few minutes old. The locals began to show their first fight of the game after the scoring and within a few minutes Simpson scored a touchdown and extra point. Marysville scored its second touchdown before the quarter was over, Galloway carrying the ball. Score 13 to 6.

Score Tied

The score was tied in the last quarter by Nelsonville, who made the necessary gains by three long passes.

1927 Students Work

Surveys Show That Practically One-Third of High School Pupils Indulge in Profitable Outside Activities

Editor's Note: From their interviews with veteran physicians last week, The Star's District Page Correspondents turned their attention to the schools. Surveys were conducted in several of the larger high schools in North Central Ohio to determine the number of students that work outside of school hours. Information secured through these surveys has been used in preparing the following article.)

PROFESSORS nowadays, had better be good. If they are not, luck be with them, for nothing lies ahead but a drear and tragic career.

When Mr. Brown, that well-dressed faculty member of Hill Valley High School faces his Physical Geography class on any Monday morning and starts elucidating on the subject of coal he had better choose his words with extreme care out of consideration for John Jones, student occupying the last seat in the third row on the left.

Coal Is His Line

It happens that John who is called Johnny by the girls and Bull by the football players, though a little hazy on the exacting details of the Physical Geography course, has a very intimate knowledge of coal. This past summer he was able to get first hand information on the subject from the depths of a coal car daily from six in the morning until ditto at night. Already this fall, he is renewing acquaintance with certain lumps he met during vacation, at various residences before the break of day. John expects to clear enough on the furnace business to clothe himself, buy his books, subscribe for the school paper, attend all social functions and have time enough left to take part in athletics and keep up his studies.

No doubt that if the eminent Dr. Winsterback had known the personnel of the class which was to study his Commercial Arithmetic text in 1927, he would have omitted that example concerning 11 and one-half yards of calico at 43 cents per yard. Dr. Winsterback might cause some worry over 11 and one-half and 43, but he could never convince a single one of those students that calico ever sold at that price. And furthermore, several of the young ladies, who are clerks outside of the schoolbuilding could inform the scholarly gentleman that the law of supply and demand has worked on Calico until now, it is almost an obsolete market term.

They Know, Too

The first sentence, of this story, though in the vernacular, is gospel. The instructor that faces a class of average high school students must know everything that is in the text and be able to back it up with practical knowledge and better, experience. Surveys conducted in several public high schools recently show that approximately one-third of all high school students are hard-fisted business men and level-headed business women.

High school students of 1927 are working. They have their own business accounts. They buy and sell. They have more on their minds than an embezzling banker. They make good grades. And, they like it.

Employments Varied

When it comes to ways of making money, originality knows no ebb with the student. The boys do janitor work, pass newspapers and magazines, work in stores and factories, usher in theaters, run errands, serve as chauffeurs and a thousand other things. The girls find employment as part time stenographers, clerks, nurse maids and tutors.

Principal W. L. Sprouse of Kenton High school, in conducting a survey, found that 32 per cent of the boys enrolled, work before and after school hours and eight per cent of the girls are engaged in employment, making a total of 117 students working in the school.

Makes $15 Per Week

Sophomores are the hardest working of the Marysville High chool classes and a survey conducted there showed that they devoted 14.4 hours each week to some profitable, outside activity. The freshmen work the least number of hours, having 10.3 hours as an average. In one particular instance, a sophomore works 30 hours per week in a drug store and draws $15 per week salary. The earning average of his class is $3.81 per week and the freshmen make $1.87 per week.

At Upper Sandusky, the "rage" among the working students this year is to "pick" chickens in the poultry houses. Boys and girls alike have taken to this particular type of employment and are making neat, weekly sums. Four and one-half hours per day clerking and doing janitor work in a downtown business place is also popular with the students.

The surveys show that about half the working students are saving their money for a college career while the others are working "just to have money."

YOUTHFUL BUILDERS

To celebrate the beginning of construction on a 52-story building in New York, the Chanin brothers, above, Henry L., 35, top, and Irwin S., 33, below, have taken out a million dollary insurance policy each. They began their spectacular career after leaving the army and since then have erected buildings of every description in Greater New York, including a group of theaters and a hotel.

Toledo Woman Seeking Damages in Wyandot County Court

Upper Sandusky, Oct. 15—Damages amounting to $25,280 are asked for in a petition filed in common pleas court here yesterday by Mrs. Dorothy J. Myers, Toledo, against Frank L. Moyer, Carey, for injuries and loss sustained by her in an accident on the night of July 9, 1927. According to the petition, the machine in which she and her husband, Harry E. Myers were riding collided with an automobile belonging to Moyer parked on Findlay-av, Carey, without lights. She also claims that shade trees on the street prevented them from seeing the car. Mrs. Myers claims that she has received permanent injury to her health, that the sight of her right eye has been destroyed and that she will have permanent facial scars.

INSTALLS NEW SIGNAL DEVICE

New York Central Places System Between Toledo and Berwick

A new signal system, probably the first of its kind in the world has been installed on the New York Central tracks between Toledo and Berwick. By placing this section of road under the direct control of the dispatcher who directs train movements entirely by signal indication, the new system supercedes the old time table and train order system, which with manual blocking, is in general use.

Using this method, the dispatcher directs train movements by signal indications without written orders and with switches which are power operated. In its application it differs widely from the general plan in which the signal system is used merely for blocking and is supplementary to the time table and train orders.

By means of a dispatching machine the dispatcher operates siding and crossover switches and the block signals along the line. He also receives complete information as to the location of all trains. One train has no official knowledge of the whereabouts of another, and it is the dispatcher's duty to establish meeting and passing points as circumstances may demand.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL WORK IS LAUNCHED

Hardin County's Quota for This Year Is Approximately 800

Kenton, Oct. 15—Quota of the Hardin County Chapter, American Red Cross, in the annual roll call for 1928, will be set at approximately 800, according to word received today by Mrs. Alfred Mathews, county secretary, from John Barton Payne, director of the American Red Cross.

In keeping with the policy of former years, no active solicitation for new members will be made this year. Those desiring to become affiliated with the local chapter are asked to apply to Mrs. Mathews at Red Cross offices in the court house.

According to a telegram received by Mrs. Andrews, "the central committee of the National Red Cross today adopted a resolution requesting the people of the United States to increase the National Red Cross membership to five million for 1928.

"Because of increased demands for service, particularly disaster relief, and despite most rigid economy of operation, the national and international Red Cross Program requires each year expenditures considerably in excess of the annual income.

"With complete confidence that the American people will rally to this call, the Central committee urges each chapter and branch to take the necessary steps in assuring such an increase."

KENTON, ADA PLAY TIE GAME

"Wildcats" and "Bulldogs" Battle Through Four Scoreless Periods

Kenton, Oct. 15—In one of the greatest football exhibitions in the history of the city, the Kenton high "Wildcats" and the Ada "Bulldogs," traditional rivals for years, battled to a 0 and 0 tie at Athletic field here Friday afternoon.

More than 1,000 fans, many of them from Ada, witnessed the thrilling contest which though no scores were recorded, provided plenty of excitement and brilliant football. It was the first of two games to be played this season by the two teams.

Neither of the clubs came within 20 yards of scoring. They resorted chiefly to straight football, only a few forward passes being tried. Ada tried a number of forward passes in the final period, two of them being intercepted by Kenton players and the remainder incomplete. Kenton tried two passes, both being good for gains averaging 15 yards.

During the early periods of play the locals were considerably weakened when Baker, quarterback, and Sharp, a half, were forced to retire because of injuries. In the final period Kenton's line-up consisted chiefly of second string men.

Compilation of figures show that the Kenton gridders outplayed their opponents in yards gained and first downs. The locals centered their attack through Ada's right, making considerable gains. Both teams in nearly every respect were evenly matched.

RICHWOOD WINS OVER FOREST

Defeat of Two Years Ago Is Avenged with 44-0 Drubbing

Richwood, Oct. 15—Avenging a 28-0 drubbing of two years ago, Richwood High came through with flying colors yesterday in running through, over and around the heavier Forest High team here to the tune of 44-0.

A Forest fumble in the first four minutes of play was recovered by Clevenger, Richwood back, and carried to the 5-yard line. Clevenger clicked again on the first play, a delayed buck, and carried the pigskin over the line. After that, it was merely the question, Who wants to make this touchdown?" Kramer collected three of the Richwood tallies, Temple, the center, made the best of opportunities to grab two markers, Brickley and Clevenger also got two apiece and the latter gave his day's performance a finishing touch with two successful try-for-points.

Richwood was supreme in every department of the game and showed the best form of the present season. The squad is pointing to its second game with LaRue High and is trying to fill an open date on Oct. 28 in order to provide a contest for the intervening time.

Alger won the right to represent Hardin County in the championship series by defeating the Kenton Reds, Mt. Victory and Nigger Island earlier in the season.

It was originally planned to play but the one game but because of certain contentions arising during the opening fray both clubs agreed to a game series.

Morris Mains, crack hurler of the Marion and Lima Independents, who completely baffled Alger batsmen Sunday, will again occupy the mound for the Logauities, while Alger is to use either "Big Bill" Fitzpatrick or Merle Mays. One Governor, Truly Great

Rogers Recalls Visit with State Executive on Eve of Young Mountaineer's Execution for Murder of Village Storekeeper

BY WILL ROGERS

TWO years ago, I blew into a state capitol to play one of my little concert engagements. Got in town in the morning early and one of the newspaper editors asked me if I would like to go up to the capitol and see the Governor; that he was a very pleasant and splendid man. Well, of course, I was loved to death at the honor, and we went up. There was several in his private office as the editor took me right in. I had also noticed several country looking folks sitting outside the office. Well we met him and he was mighty sociable and nice.

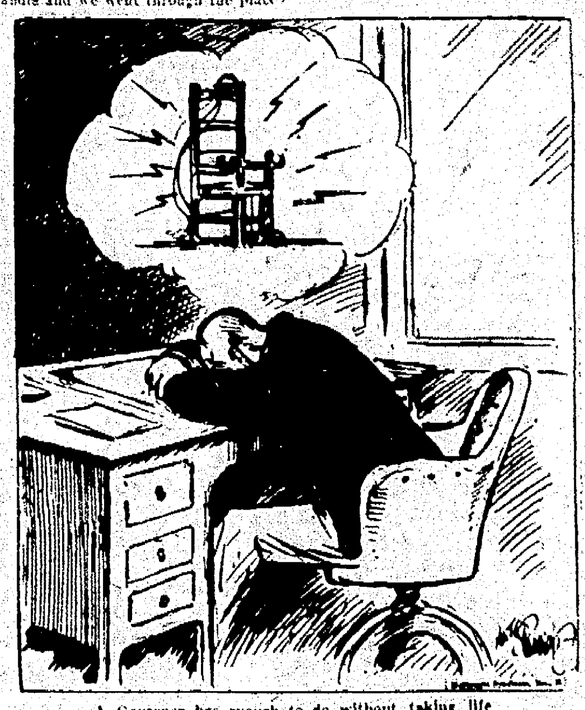
Exchanged Stories

We exchanged a lot of the usual Democratic hard luck stories; of what a great party it was but just wasn't understood. He asked me if I had ever been out to see the home of a famous President who was buried there. I told him I had never been there. 'Course I knew what a great man he had been, but at the same time I had heard enough to know that an "Injun" didn't exactly rate high with him. And being a direct and proud descendant of the Cherokees I knew he had quite a lot to do with running them out, and making them go West. But on the other hand I knew that he had unconsciously favored us in the long run, so I forgave him. Well, the Governor said he wanted to take me out there himself, and show me the place. I told him I didn't want him to do a thing like that; that I knew he was busy and had no time to tour me around. But he insisted and 'phoned for his car.

While he was waiting they took me up to the Historical Library and there I started in an acquaintance with John Trotwood Moore, the best historical writer on our Southern heroes. Don't miss his books.

Fine Old House

Well, the Governor drove us out there, through a beautiful country and right in the most wonderful part is the old home of this unique President. It was late and the place was closed for tourists, and as there is no gas or electric lights in the house it looked like we wouldn't get to see the inside. But the Governorr dug up the caretaker and when he saw the Governor, why he got a candle and we went through the place



A Governor has enough to do without taking life

by candle light. I won't dwell on what we saw for instead of prowling off to Europe to see some old junk that means nothing to our lives, why go and see this old place.

Facing Gallows

On the way back to town I was thanking the Governor for my good fortune in having him show me the place personally and wasting all that valuable time on me, when he told me the following story: He was on his second term as Governor of this state, and at daybreak in the morning he was faced with the first execution of a prisoner he had ever had. "He is a young boy, Oh 24 or 25, married and has a family. He is a true mountaineer from the mountains in the Western part of the state. He killed an old man who was a storekeeper, supposedly for his money. He was tried, convicted. The boy claimed the killing was accidential. His pleas for life imprisonment has been refused by our higher court and all that stands between that boy's life and death is me. I have been to see the boy myself several times. He is not the sullen, slouchy type of mountaineer boy at all. You could dress him up and you would mistake him for one of our college boys. He had a very good record but the evidence showed that he had committed the crime in some way. I don't believe in capital punishment, I don't believe God gave us the right to willfully take anybody's life. But I swore to uphold the Constitution of the state when I took office. I have gone over every phase of the case. I have talked with his people; I have talked with the witnesses; I have tried every means within my power to find some reason to keep from taking that boy's life. And do you know what is one of the main reasons that makes me hesitate in giving him life imprisonment is the very qualities of the boy himself. He is not afraid of man, beast, or Devil. He is absolutely fearless and if he goes to the scaffold before we see the light of another day, he will walk there more steadily than we will get out of this very car. Now, if I commute his sentence I know that he is the type of boy that could not stand life imprisonment. As sure as we are here, he would at some time with that absolute fearlessness attack and kill some guard and perhaps take more life in escaping. Fear of being shot would mean nothing to him.

"I am not a rich man, but I would give all that I possess, and start life again without a penny, if this thing hadn't come up. It shouldn't be that these things should rest absolutely in one man's hands. It's asking too much of a human being. A Governor has enough to do without taking life. I as hard for her as me. I can't go to your lecture tonight. I had intended to, but these people will be coming to my house all evening and thru the night. I want to give you one of Bob Taylor's books, with his wonderful speeches and lectures in them. I want to autograph it for you. You would have loved Taylor, he was a great man. He was Governor, he could appreciate my feelings tonight. Oh, if I just had some grounds to do something."

Good For Something

Well, as I left his house and hurried to the hall to annoy the audience, I felt, "Well, maybe a comedian is some good for something anyhow." I left the town after the show, rode all night to another city, but the minute I arrived there, I bought a morning paper. It was in the same state. I nervously looked to see if there was headlines of an execution. There was. I knew then that duty to a sworn pledge had outweighed conscience.

He had explained the case with so much feeling that I had gone thru a bad night myself. I felt, however, that I had met a man with a real heart. I couldn't ever say that a politician didn't have any real feeling. When I played there last year he had been elected to his third term as Governor, a case unparalleled in that state. We had another and more cheerful visit, and he was in my front row that night. He won't be there when I go back next time, for the Great Governor of All didn't reprieve his sentence.

I'll bet he will look for that old mountaineer boy up there, and I wouldn't be surprised he don't find him. For if he did do the crime, I bet Great Governor will find some extenuating circumstances that he will keep him there with him. This man was Governor Peay of the great state of Tennessee, who in some historic records will go down as signing the Anti-Evolution Bill; but in the hearts of everybody that ever met him and knew him, he will go down as a real man with a soul and love for his fellow man.

LEGION POST TO AID VETERANS

Urging Ex-Service Men To Take Advantage of Adjusted Compensation

A campaign to have all World War veterans take advantage of the government's offer of adjusted compensation before Jan. 1, 1928, when the time for filing applications expires, has been launched by Bird-McGinnis Post, No. 102, of the American Legion with the intention of accomplishing practically 100 per cent results in Marion County.

According to estimates made by officers of the local Legion organization, it is probable that at least 200 Marion County men who served in the World War have not filed applications, although the law giving them this privilege has been in effect since May 19, 1924.

Definite Figures

Definite figures received by local Legion officers in charge of the campaign here show that of the 4,200,000 ex-service men entitled to adjusted compensation, 3,425,501 had filed applications on July 1, 1927, leaving 774,499 who had neglected submitting their claims. Since that time the number of applications received in Washington has averaged only about 600 daily. At that rate there would still be 500,000 not registered on Jan. 1, 1928, the report shows.

It is for the purpose of speeding up the tardy veterans that Legion posts throughout the country are taking a hand as is being done in Marion County.

In urging the ex-service men in Marion County to act promptly in filing their applications, officers and committees representing Bird-McGinnis Post are pointing out that the adjusted compensation certificate is in effect a fully paid-up endowment insurance policy. If the holder of the policy should die before the end of 20 years his beneficiary would receive the full sum which would have been paid the policyholder himself had he lived.

Requirements

In case a veteran dies without having made application, his beneficiaries may apply, but they can receive only about one-third of the amount to which they would have been entitled had the veteran himself applied.

Requirements for filing applications by veterans of the World War, or by widows, children or their guardians, mothers or fathers of veterans who depended upon them for support at the time of their death, or have become dependent on outside support, are simply to secure application forms at the nearest American Legion Post, United States Veterans' Bureau office or hospital, army, navy or marine corps recruiting office, fill out and forward to Washington in the envelop which accompanies the application blank.

Officers of Bird-McGinnis Post, it was announced today, will have blanks ready at any time for applicants and will be prepared to assist in filling out the form preparatory to filing in Washington.

More Than 1,000 Women at Closing Session of Cooking School at Star Auditorium

Third Annual Event Considered Most Successful Ever Staged Here; Mrs. George O. Thurn in Charge of Four-Day Program

More than 1,000 women attended the closing session of The Marion Star's third annual free cooking school, Friday afternoon in the Star Auditorium. In the improvised nursery at the rear of the auditorium, in charge of Mrs. G. E. Waddell, kindergarten instructor, and her assistants, more than 80 children, ranging in ages from one month to school age, were cared for. It is accorded by patrons and sponsors alike that this year's school was by far the most successful in point of interest and attendance.

Mrs. George O. Thurn, cooking school lecturer and demonstrator, chose for her lecture subject, "Why We Eat?" She advised those who would reduce to do it sensibly, surely, slowly and safely. She presented a group of food classifications suitable for a well balanced diet to build new bone and tissue, energy, and regulate the processes of the body.

Recipes demonstrated in the school yesterday follow:

Select lamb chops from the leg. Brown nicely on both sides. Season well. Into a pan put two chops, then a layer of sliced raw potatoes, a little sliced onion, salt and pepper. Keep doing this until pan is filled, or until you have what you think will be enough for the family. Put a cup and a half of water in the pan the meat was browned in and pour over the meat and potatoes. Cook slowly on top of stove for about two hours. Pile on platter or chop plate and put around it a border of buttered peas.

Doughnuts

One cup sugar; two and one-half tablespoons shortening; three eggs; one cup milk; four to five cups flour; four teaspoons baking power; one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg; one and one-half teaspoons salt.

Cream shortening with one-half the sugar. Beat eggs until light, add remaining sugar and combine mixtures. Add three and one-half cups flour sifted with baking powder, salt and nutmeg; then enough more flour to make a dough stiff enough to roll. Add the last flour alternately with the milk. Toss one-third mixture on a floured board, knead slightly, roll out to one-fourth inch thickness. Shape with cutter. Fry in deep fat.

Lattice Potatoes

Peel rather large potatoes and cut with a potato latticer. Let stand in ice water 1 hour. Drain and dry in a clean cloth and fry in deep hot fat. To brown well, take the basket up out of the fat after being in for five minutes. Let the air circulate through them well. Return to hot fat for a few minutes and the potatoes will be deliciously browned and crisp. 390 degrees, or when crust browns in 20 seconds.

Grape Fruit Salad

One envelope gelatine; 1 cup cold water; 2 cups boiling water or fruit juice; ¾ cup sugar; ½ cup lemon juice; dash of cayenne; 1 grape fruit or 1 can of grape fruit; ½ pound white grapes; 1 pimento; 1 teaspoon salt.

Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot water, add sugar, salt, stir well, strain and cool. Have the grape fruit in whole sections. Put a little of the gelatine in the bottom of a ring mold and put strips of the pimentos at regular spaces to decorate the mold. When this is set pour in the remaining gelatine into which the grape fruit and grapes have been added. Turn out on a chop plate garnish with lettuce and pile mayonnaise in the center.

Glorified Rice

Two cups boiled rice; 1 can pineapple; 1 pint whipped cream; ¾ cup sugar; 1 envelope gelatine; ½ cup cold water.

Dissolve gelatine in water, add to hot pineapple juice (1½ cups), add sugar. When mixture begins to thicken, whip with a wire egg whip until almost white. Beat in the pineapple cut in small pieces and the rice. Lastly fold in the whipped cream. Mold in cups. Serve with just a little whipped cream topped with a cherry.

Caramel Short Cake

Cake—One third cup shortening; 2-3 cup of sugar; 1 egg; 2-3 cup milk; 1 2-3 cups flour; 2 teaspoons baking powder; 1-2 teaspoon salt; flavoring.

Cream shortening and sugar, add egg; beat well, add flavor and milk alternately. Bake in muffin pans in moderate oven about 15 minutes.

Caramel Sauce—3 cups brown sugar; 1-2 cup fat; 1-2 pint heavy cream.

Cook in double boiler over slow fire one hour, stirring occasionally. This sauce is delicious on ice cream.

Date Pudding

Three eggs; 1 cup sugar; 1 cup nutmeats; 1 cup dates; 3-4 cup flour; 1 teaspoon baking powder; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Separate eggs, beat yolks and add sugar gradually, add vanilla dates and nut meats cut in pieces and floured. Have the flour, baking powder and salt sifted together, and add alternately with beaten egg whites. Put in greased pan and bake in 350 degree oven about 35 minutes. Cut in squares with whipped cream.

"Uncle" George Norris Is Likely To Take Few Delegates to Convention

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Star Correspondent

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—Although Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska is the Progressives' candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, the Progressives don't mean by that that they expect the party to put his name at their ticket's head.

SEN. GEO. W. NORRIS

All they hope is that he'll have enough delegates to make it very hard for anybody else to win without his help.

In that event, the outlook will be mightly bilious for any Old Guard favorite, or even for any dark horse who refuses to commit his administration to a decidedly more "advanced" program than the country's had in many a long year.

IT doesn't look like an impossibility.

Uncle George ought to be able to account for Nebraska, North Dakota and Wisconsin solidly, Minnesota, South Dakota and Iowa partially, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas and Missouri perhaps to some extent, and probably some other scattering votes here and there.

All in all, he may take a pretty good bloc of votes into the convention—maybe not a decisive bloc, but a sufficient number to be well worth a hard-pressed candidate's while to bid for substantially.

UNCLE GEORGE will be a difficult old man for a politician of the regular Republican school to deal with.

He'll demand farm relief—whatever that is—of course.

That would be all right for either of the notable farm relief-ers, Frank O. Lowden and Vice President Dawes—as far as it goes. Outside the subject of farm relief, however, both Lowden and Dawes are as orthodox as any "down easter" could ask. Uncle George, on the other hand, has been overheard making scurrilous remarks about the "robber tariff."

Herbert Hoover's against Uncle George's brand of farm relief.

Charles Evans Hughes and the Nebraska senator might as well belong to two violently opposing parties, for all the things they agree on.

IT'S going to strain the leading regular Republican candidates' political consciences considerably, then, to come to any sort of terms with Uncle George.

Yet it's surprising what pledges a candidate can see his way clear to give, when they mean the difference between his victory and defeat.

Senator Norris is a hard bargainer.

He doesn't want any of the things it usually is possible to satisfy a public man with, in order to get him to sit down and be good, and stop bothering the party managers with his nagging.

He doesn't care shucks for office. The Nebraska Progressives had all they could do to persuade him to run for the senate last time. He could have a cabinet job in a minute, if it would keep him quiet. An ambassador isn't supposed to chew tobacco, and Uncle George does; but he could be one, to any court in Europe, if that would satisfy him.

But no. Uncle George has these bollshev-EEK-ky theories, and they're all he's interested in.

IF the Republican convention turns out to be a one-sided affair—if some candidate succeeds in corralling enough votes to nominate him early in the game and his name goes through a-kitting—Uncle George and his farm belt cohorts will simply be spectators—rather foolish looking ones, too, in the midst of all the Old Guard rejoicings.

If the deliberations get tied up in a bowknot, though, and the aspirants have to ask the Progressives what they'll take to unsnarl 'em, we're liable to see a few concessions made that'll wring some large-sized groans from the regulars.

In the meantime Uncle George chews tobacco and says nothing.

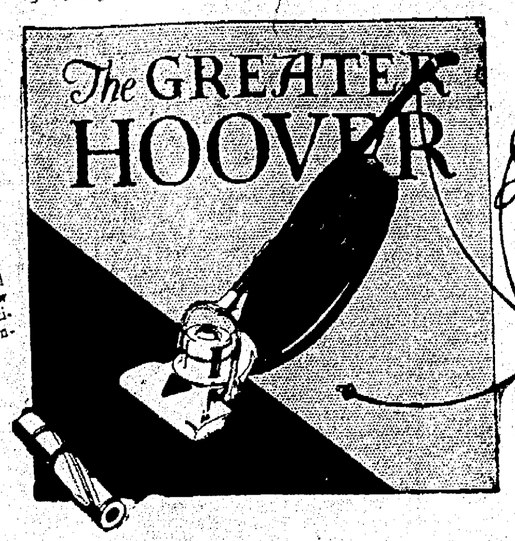
"POSITIVE AGITATION"

"A perfected principle in home cleaning science, sponsored by the world's oldest and largest maker of electric cleaners"



The GREATER HOOVER
"POSITIVE AGITATION" is beating, reduced to a scientific process by the patented Hoover Agitator. Do not fail to see this new cleaning principle demonstrated.
It pays to know the difference between The HOOVER and a vacuum cleaner

OLD—old as housekeeping itself; yet new—new as tomorrow morning: this is "Positive Agitation" as embodied in the sensational new Hoover.

It is beating—the first essential of thorough rug-cleaning—of a sort hitherto unknown, rendered exact and positive by mechanical means.

This new Hoover floats the carpet or rug on a cushion of air, and then, in soft, swiftly repeated taps of instant pressure, vibrates it like a pennant in a breeze.

Nothing has ever resembled it. It is new, startling, revolutionary! It far surpasses even the standard-design Hoover in these particulars:

1 For the first time, it makes possible "Positive Agitation" of floor coverings.

2 By actual test, in the ordinary cleaning time, it beats out and sweeps up from carpetings an average of 131% more dirt.

3 It is an even greater rug-saver; the oftener a carpet is cleaned with a Hoover the longer that carpet will wear.

4 It is virtually service-proof; every part, including the new motor, requiring no oiling.

5 It increases the efficiency of its remarkable dusting tools because of its 50% stronger suction.

6 Its exclusive dust- and germ-proof bag is now washable.

7 Its form and finish are of startling beauty; and every new feature insures greater operating ease.

You owe it to yourself to see and understand this new Hoover. It represents the greatest single contribution to efficient home-keeping made in many years. You'll know why when you see it in action.

Come in today or phone us and we'll bring one to your home for a free demonstration. No obligation.

Northwestern-Ohio State Game Most Important in Big Ten

Chicago-Purdue Clash Is Listed as Second Choice On Conference Calendar

Four Mid-West Gridirons To Be Scenes of Annual Elimination Round in Race for Championship Honors

BY GENE HOFFMAN

Chicago, Oct. 15—The annual struggle for football supremacy in the Big Ten Conference supremacy in the Big in earnest on four mid-western gridirons today.

Northwestern vs. Ohio State at Columbus, appears to be the conference headliner, with Purdue at Chicago a close second. In the other two championship games today Minnesota plays Indiana at Bloomington and Michigan tackles Wisconsin at Madison.

Illinois and Iowa the two remaining Big Ten teams, are both scheduled against non-conference opponents. The Illini clashes with Iowa State at Urbana while the Hawks get some much needed exercise against Wabash at Iowa City.

"Wow" at Stadium

In the parlance of the campus, the Northwestern-Ohio State tilt at Columbus should be a "wow." Its result may furnish an excellent forecast as to the probable winner of the coveted conference title.

Northwestern, habitually the underdog of the Big Ten until a few years ago when Glenn Thistlewaite developed in the Evanston boys a fine taste for raw meat, is determined to carry its purple banner to glory under the leadership of the new football mentor, Dick Hanley.

Hanley inherited a number of stars developed by Thistlewaite. He has demonstrated to date that these gridders have lost none of their prowess under his guidance. "Tiny" Lewis, Capt. Vic Gustafson and Fisher, are three mainstays from whom much is expected in today's important struggle.

State Should Win

Ohio State, with such men as Marek, Eby, Grim, Meyer, Cox and Bell, stacks up as one of the toughest foes in the field. On the basis of past performances, the Buckeyes should win, but it must be remembered the record was piled up against an entirely different Northwestern team than the one in charge of Hanley today.

It is a good guess that the 50,000 fans expected to jam their way into Buckeye stadium will see one of the hardest fought games of the year.

The Purdue-Chicago game here looks like a toss-up. It will be no great surprise either way it goes. The Boilermakers basking in the glory of their victory over Harvard are confident Chicago will go the way of the Crimson.

Much is heard of Ralph "Pest" Welch, the triple-threat Purdue half, who is hailed as a second Red Grange whether or not Welch can repeat his devastating attack that upset Harvard when he goes against Stagg's Maroons remains to be seen.

The wily old man of the Midway has a greatly improved team as demonstrated in previous games, and many experts favor his strategy to win over that of Coach Phelan.

Minnesota Favored

Minnesota, with its pile-driving All-American fullback, Herb Joesting and a strong supporting cast, is favored to win easily over Indiana. The Hoosiers lost their first conference struggle last Saturday to Chicago. Today's game will feature Indiana's annual homecoming celebration.

Michigan is another team favored to win on its record. The Wolverines clash with Wisconsin at Madison. Not since 1890 have the boys from Ann Arbor bowed in defeat to Wisconsin. But the Badgers reason that sooner or later their luck must change, and they have picked today as the day.

Will Watch Garland

In the Illinois-Iowa State game at Urbana, all eyes will focus on Garland Grange, brother of the famous "Red," who, after a number of setbacks occasioned by injury and illness, will get his first chance to show what measure of his brother's greatness, he possesses.

Owing to a weight advantage of 10 pounds to the man, Iowa is expected to experience little difficulty in grinding out a victory over Wabash.

Other mid-western games which will attract wide attention are, Cornell vs. Michigan State at Lansing, Pittsburgh vs. Drake at Des Moines, St. Louis vs. Loyola at Chicago and Grinnell vs. Nebraska at Lincoln.

BROOKLYN REVIVES PENNANT HOPES AS BANCROFT SIGNS

Predicted Dave Will Be Named Manager of Robins Outfit

New York, Oct. 15—Pennant dreams were revived six months in advance in Brooklyn today as a result of the club's acquisiton of Dave Bancroft, manager and shortstop of the Boston Braves.

Bancroft, a 10-year-man, was signed by Wilbert Robinson, president and manager of the Robins, immediately after being granted an unconditional release by President Emil E. Fuchs of the Boston club. It was freely predicted today that Bancroft would be made manager of the Brooklyn team when Uncle Robbie decides to retire.

Although officials of both clubs declined to discuss the terms of the deal, it is understood that Bancroft will be paid $20,000 by Brooklyn. The Robins have needed a first-class shortstop for years, and Bancroft should fill the bill.

With Bancy in the line-up, Brooklyn will have a wealth of infield material next season. The other newcomers are Harry Riconda, Milwaukee third baseman; Deg Bissonette, slugging first baseman from the International League; and Howard Freigau, from Chicago infielder snared by Brooklyn in the draft.

Judge Fuchs and Bancroft parted the best of friends. The star shortstop played good ball for the Braves up until this season, when he was handicapped by illness. He failed to develop a strong team, however.

Bancroft is 35 years old. He began his career under the big tent with the Phillies, and played on John McGraw's championship teams until he was traded to Boston at the close of the 1923 season.

"BABE" AND "LOU" IN NEW ROLES

A baseball autographed by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig is the prize Stanley B. Strayer brought back from Lima yesterday where he saw the home run twins in action. Ruth was in the lineup for Lima and Lou played with Celina.

The game for the inter-county championship was won by Lima 7 to 0. The Lima lineup also contained the names of Ruth Henline, Brooklyn catcher; Billy Southworth, Cardinal center fielder; Clark Pittenger, Cincinnati second baseman.

Strayer and Carl F. Werley, of the Marion Tobacco Co. attended the game as the guests of Delsel-Weimer Co., cigar manufacturers. The foul was caught in the seventh inning and the ball was immediately autographed by Ruth and Gehrig.

About a dozen Marion fans attended the game.

Indoor Ball League To Be Discontinued; Volleyball Will Be Substituted at "Y"

Lack of Interest Given as Reason for Dropping Recreation Ball; Rudolph Plans League of 10 Teams; Five Already Organized

Due to apparent lack of interest in indoor recreation ball the Y. M. C. A. league which was in the process of formation has been discontinued and a volley ball league formed in its place according to F. O. Rudolph, "Y" physical director. Formation of the volley ball league is rapidly nearing completion Rudolph says.

It is planned to have a league of eight or 10 teams to play at 7:30 o'clock on Tuesday nights. If necessary play will be continued on Friday night as well, according to the physical director. The league will be an all city organization and will be independent of the "Y" representative volley ball team.

Five Teams In

Five teams have been organized to date according to Rudolph and others will be added to the list within a few days. The teams already in the league are Van Atta Hardware, Clark's Epworth Methodist team, Jim Lingo's Epworth Methodist team, Fred Sage's team of the First Presbyterian church, and the Uhler-Phillips team. Participation in the league will not be limited to any organization. The only prerequisite according to Rudolph is that players be members of the Y. M. C. A.

Nearly 15 men responded to the call of Rudolph for tryouts for the "Y" representative volley ball team. Practice will be held on Tuesday and Thursday nights of each week. Captains will be elected at the practice next Tuesday night.

Last year this team was runner up in the Y. M. C. A. league and one year before won the state hunting.

Knute and His Fighting South Bend Irishmen May Meet Surprise in Middies

Navy Has Green and Relatively Inexperienced Team This Year; Notre Dame's Eleven Considered Strongest Since Days of "Four Horsemen"

BY MALCOLM ROY

Baltimore, Oct. 15—Although Notre Dame is favored to defeat the Naval Academy football eleven on the Municipal Stadium gridiron here this afternoon in a game which has assumed championship proportions, there is a distinct feeling that the big Navy team, with its powerful line and speedy backfield, may spring a surprise on Knute Rockne and his Irishmen from South Bend.

Navy has a green and relatively inexperienced team this year but it has had a long siege of training under the skillful guiding hand of Bill Ingram and has developed not only a powerful line but one of the fastest backfields that has ever graced an Annapolis outfit. On the other hand Notre Dame is regarded by many as having the best eleven it has sent out since the days of the "Four Horsemen," with the usual cast-iron line and a humming backfield in which Flanagan is the ace and Dahman a constant threat.

Only Three Return

Only three or four members of the Navy eleven which held the Army to a tie last season in that memorable game at Chicago and which shared all-eastern honors with Brown, are in the line-up which will tackle Notre Dame. The line from tackle to tackle is a solid wall of new men, none of whom has had any previous experience in playing varsity football at Annapolis. The Middies, however, have a pair of veteran ends and one of them, Ted Sloane is regarded as being in a class with Benny Oosterbaan of Michigan as a receiver of forward passes. In the backfield the Middies have a wonderful triple-threat man in Lloyd, who was an end on the 1926 team, but has been shifted to halfback. Lloyd is the biggest man on the squad and he has speed and power to burn. He is a fine punter, a good passer and there is none better in charging around the ends. Hannegan, captain of the team, Bauer and Clifton make up the balance of the regular backfield and in addition the Middies have a second-string set of backs who are almost if not quite as good as this first quartet.

Rely on Flanagan

Notre Dame is relying most strongly for its offensive play on Flanagan, who got loose against the Army last year to score the touchdown that sent the West Pointers down to defeat. Flanagan has the advantage of a wonderful line in front of him, one that mops up the field with opposition and makes big holes for the backs to sift through. If the Navy line, young and green as it is, can hold this Notre Dame charge in check, much of the power of the Irish attack will be lost.

This is the first year that Notre Dame has ever played the Navy, although it has been a mainstay on the West Point schedule for the last dozen years or more. However, as the Army-Notre Dame battle will not be held until the second week of November, there is little chance that today's game will serve to give a reliable line on the relative strength of the two service elevens.

The lineup:

Navy	Pos.	Notre Dame
Moret	le	Voedisch
Wilson	lt	Miller
Eddy	lg	Smith
Hardin	c	Fredericks
Burke	rg	Leppig
Geise	rt	Polisky
Sloane	re	Walsh
Hannegan	qb	Riley
Lloyd	lh	Flanagan
Bauer	rh	Dahman
Clifton	fb	Collins

25,000 EXPECTED TO SEE SYRACUSE-GEORGETOWN

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 15— A crowd of 25,000 persons was expected to witness the annual Syracuse-Georgetown football game here today. With an improved line, the Orange hoped to stop the Georgetown steam roller. Syracuse is sticking to its last week's lineup.

TIFFIN ALL-STARS HERE SUNDAY

RENAULT FINISHES DELANEY SCUFFLE WITH BROKEN NOSE

Boston Ballyhoo Man Survives First Tilt in Heavy Eliminations

New York, Oct. 15—Jack Renault, of Canada was eliminated from the heavyweight beak-busting tournament last night at Madison Square Garden by his compatriot, Mons. Ovila Chapdelaine, otherwise known as Jack Delaney, but in winning Delaney failed to definitely establish himself as a giant killer.

Delaney slew his man rather easily, performing the beak-busting specialty in the fourth round when a vicious right uppercut broke a small bone in the bridge of Renault's nose. But Delaney apparently had no zest for the kill. He was content to keep Renault off by spearing him with lazy left jabs to the head or soft hooks to the stomach.

Delaney came on to win practically every round after the second when he was floored with a short right hook to the chin. The knockdown came as the men were charging together. Renault landed first and Delaney hit the floor. He came up as the timekeeper counted one second.

The high spot of the battle came in the first few seconds of the fourth round. Renault, in some way, had twisted his body so that Delaney was able to come up from the side and between Jack's arm with a beautiful right uppercut that flattened Renault's nose.

BOWLING RESULTS

Grid Captains

The name of Emerson W. Nelson, mentioned in connection with the grid doings at the University of Iowa, may not unleash any flood of football tales. But refer to Mr. Nelson as "Spike" and the floodgates will be opened.

Nelson, captain of this year's eleven, is probably one of the greatest linemen the west has produced. Two years ago he was rated as one of the two best tackles in the western football conference and mentioned for all-American team. Last fall he was an unanimous selection for all-American honors.

His home's in Cherokee, Ia.

BROWN AND YALE TO MEET AT NEW HAVEN

30,000 Gather in Bowl To Witness Thirty-Fifth Revival of Classic

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 15—Brown and Yale, meeting here this afternoon in the thirty-fifth revival of what has come to be a New England football classic, attracted 30,000 to Yale Bowl, under weather conditions ideal for players and spectators alike. Coach "Tes" McLaughry, of Brown, had six of his "iron men" of last season on hand as the basis of his team today, and "Tad" Jones started Yale's sturdy regulars who crushed Bowdoin two weeks ago and who last week barely lost to Georgia.

The game today came earlier in the season than any previous Yale-Brown match, and was the first the two teams have played under their "no scouting" agreement. In the long period of years in which Yale and Brown have played football together the record of games won is Yale 24, Brown 4. Two games have been tied.

Eagles to Step in High Class Baseball as They Meet Professional Team

Michigan and Southern Leagues Contribute to Visitors' Lineup; Cross, Who Has Been Hitting .750 in Two Games with Marion, Will Be Back

The Marion Eagles are to step out in high so class baseball circles Sunday when the Tiffin All-Stars come to Lincoln Park for an afternoon of diamond sport. The All-Stars according to the advance dope and Francis Bacon will put out about the best brand of baseball seen on the Lincoln Park diamond this season. The team will be composed of stars of the half way big time leagues. The Michigan league, the Southern league, and perhaps the American Association will be represented on the Tiffin outfit.

Cross To Be Back

There will be an American Association player on the grounds however, whether or not the All-Stars have any in their lineup. "Slick" Cross, of the Louisville Colonels, will be back in the lineup for the Eagles. Cross' batting has been one of the features of the two games he has played here. In eight trips to the plate he has garnered two home runs, two doubles, two singles, and has truck out twice.

The rest of the Eagles' line will be the same as in the past two weeks. Good and Conroy will be at the battery. Cross will be on first, Bacon on second, Buckland at third, and Rizor at short. Pine in left, Price, center, and Rowan in right will compose the out field.

Crissinger and Lattimore will handle the game. Crissinger has been doing some neat work on Lincoln Park diamond this summer. All of which helps to make the great American sport what it is.

The game is called for 2:00 o'clock.

Only Buick has an engine Vibrationless beyond belief

BUICK'S remarkable freedom from vibration is due primarily to three vitally important factors. First—the inherent smoothness of the Buick Valve-in-Head six-cylinder engine. Second—rubber engine mountings, front and rear. And third—the scientific and almost perfect balance of the entire Buick crankshaft assembly.

These factors, in turn, have been made possible by Buick principles of design; Buick facilities of research and experiment; and Buick's unrivaled experience in the manufacture of two million quality motor cars.

Only Buick enjoys these advantages. And only Buick provides the silken performance—the unvarying smoothness at all speeds—the longer life and greater serviceability of an engine vibrationless beyond belief.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

Today was the best day in the week, which is Saturday. It was kinda coolish but not cold, so when I had got the milking and the cleaning done and had fed my face we all went over to the mudhole for a swim. My mother says for me to never go in swimming on a full stummick, so I backed into the water and swum on my back, because I had et a heap of breakfast, but when the Lost Rag of Tripe plastered me in the face with a handful of yeller mud I forgot all about the full stummick and turned over, and nothing happened. Women are not so very brite. Then I went back to the house for my bat and ball and the delivery man had been there and left three chickens and my grandfather who kills chickens and turkeys for us had went fishing, so there was not anyone to kill them and my mother wanted to clean them for Sunday, so she astel me if us boys couldn't do it and we said we could.

I got hold of the first one by the legs and Banty got it by the head and pulled its neck acrosst the block and Nibs bit it with the hatchet and it came right in two as easy as pie, and when I threw the chicken down on the ground it let a squawk out of it. So I picked it up and tried it again, then I tried it a lot more times but it didn't squawk any more no matter how hard I flang it down. The next one was a bigger one and when Nibs had cut its neck off I swang it around and they all got blood in their faces, and I don't know which one done it but one of them had picked up the other dead chicken and they slammed me in the face with it, so that when we had finished with the other one and took them in the house I was smeared and my mother gave a scream and had to bang onto the door till she saw me grin. Then we went fishing and looking for my grandfather, but we didn't find him or catch anything.

My grandfather didn't get home till after dark and my father had to help him up the step, and when my father asted him, "Did you have any luck?" my grandfather said, "I should shay sho." And when my mother asted me to put some coal in the store while she fixed something for my grandfather I said, "I should shay sho," and I was too smart. My father hollered for me to go to bed. So I went up and pulled Jubilee up by the rope in his teeth and did. I should worry.

Who Believe You Are Entitled to Success In This World

THIS IS PROBABLY THE MOST AMAZING OPPORTUNITY OF YOUR LIFETIME

Last month a certain man started in Coshocton for this company. In his first four days he made over $250.00. Another man, Wright, started the same week in Newark and made $80 the first day.

Riser made over $200 the same week in Lancaster.

Several men in our Columbus office are making similar amounts regularly. These men are concrete examples of Air-Way opportunities. They know, they are on the Royal Road to Success and they will gladly help any man, who is decent and sincere, to get on the same road.

Air-Way earnings are not spasmodic. It is not a "Feast or Famine" proposition. It is a steady, honest business that has met with astounding success and has made many men more successful than they had ever dreamed of being.

It would take every page in this paper to print even a part of the evidence we could present as to the success of our men and the opportunity offered others.

Industrial, Specialty Bonds Lead Upward Move

American Investors in Government and Corporate Bonds Reinvest Money

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

New York, Oct. 15 — Railroad stocks firm; industrial stocks firm; domestic bonds steady; foreign bonds firm; grain steady; copper steady; oil weak; cotton irregular; rubber firm; sugar steady; pig iron steady, and foreign exchange irregular.

New York, Oct. 15—The industrial and specialty stocks which led Friday's closing rally continued to move upward at the beginning of trading today. Stocks of the mercantile companies and the Nickel Plate Railroad group were in good demand at a higher range of prices.

Payments to American investors today, in the form of interest on government and corporate bonds, reached the huge total of $300,000,000. A good portion of which flowed back to investment channels. Buying of the better grade of dividend stocks was in evidence at the start, and most of the activities of the first period centered around the steel, motor and manufacturing stocks. Aggressive forward movements were continued in General Asphalt, radio, American Can, National Distiller, May Department Stores and other of yesterday's star performers.

Reports Satisfactory

The week-end business reports noted satisfactory improvement in strategic lines of trade since the end of the third quarter. Dun's Review reported indications of a forward movement in business before the end of the month. Textile, leather and building trades are keeping their forces well occupied, and the agricultural yield of spring wheat and other important crops is satisfactory.

In view of the prevailing impression that this is a "distributing" market, traders were not disposed to add very heavily to their commitments particularly in the speculative favorites, which have been skyrocketing with little or no interruption in the last three months. Price changes were therefore narrow in stock of this class.

Heavy liquidation of a number of the well-known independent oil stocks followed reports of possible further interruption of cash dividends in strong companies. Prairie oil and gas set the pace, and others are expected to follow. Pure Oil declined to the lowest price since the latter part of 1924, and Skelly and Phillips petroleum were sold at a lower range of prices.

The can stocks, American and Continental, forged ahead in good form in the leadership of the manufacturing stocks, and Collins and Aikman, for the equipments, sold at the year's highest price above 94. American Linseed added another two points to yesterday's 3½ point gain and reached a new high above 55. Preferred stock was also strong.

Hedge selling of cotton and southern liquidation depressed cotton prices about $1.25 a bale, but selling pressure was not heavy and offerings were comparatively light. The week-end grain markets were barely steady, with narrow price changes, as also were the leading commodity markets. Bond prices were firm, with foreign government issues holding the position of leaders in general activity.

JAMES H. M'COY IS FIRST TO CAST VOTE

Files Ballot Under Provision of Absent Voters' Law; Three Others Act

To James H McCoy, 240 Pleasant-st, goes the distinction of having cast the first vote in Marion County's fall election.

He filed his ballot yesterday with the county board of elections under provisions of the absent voters' law. This law permits persons who will be away from home on election day to vote in advance. The period for receiving absent voters' ballots began Monday of this week and will continue up to and including the Saturday preceding election in November.

Three other local residents took advantage of the asent voters' privilege yesterday. Should the advance voting keep up at that rate the total will compare favorably with records of former years, election board officials stated today.

The highest mark ever reached here in absent voters' ballots was slightly above 500. The general average has been about 200.

An unusually light vote was predicted in early forecasts of the local election but recent developments have appeared to change the situation. It is now generally believed that interest shown in two special proposals to be voted upon here, one for remodelling of the courthouse and the other for enlargement of the city's sewer system, will result in a total vote at least up to the average.

Referendum on the Marshall bill, to be passed upon by voters of the entire state, is also expected to be an important factor in creating interest in the election.

The county board of elections is now completing arrangements for registration days, which have been set for Oct. 21 and 22.

New Plan of Accounting In Handling Auto Tags Funds To Be Opposed By Auditor

Earl E. Thomas Says Officers in Other Counties Take Similar Stand Against Proposal; Says It's Too Complicated

A new plan of accounting in handling of receipts from sale of automobile license tags, which has been proposed by state officials to county auditors of Ohio, will be strongly opposed by County Auditor Earl E. Thomas, he stated today following receipt of a communication outlining the program.

He predicted that auditors of a majority of other counties in the state will take a similar stand.

The new plan, as described by A. R. Peckinpaugh, deputy state auditor, who wrote the letter placing the proposal before county officials, relates to auto licenses sold to persons who reside outside the county where the licenses are sold.

The law permits issuance of licenses to non-residents upon filing of the proper credentials. Under the present plans the license agency forwards money received from these sales to the counties where the auto owners reside.

The new plan would have the money turned into the treasury of the county where the sales are are made and then forwarded by the auditor to the county where the auto owner resides.

"Too Complicated"

Thomas says that he objects to the proposed change because it would require opening accounts with virtually all counties in the state, thus creating a complicated and unnecessary addition to the records of his office. The same situation would exist in other counties.

In the last session of the legislature, Thomas says, all county auditors of Ohio urged adoption of a law which would require auto owners to buy their licenses in their home counties. The bill was defeated by a small margin of votes.

Thomas says that the bill was defeated largely as the result of opposition from the state commissioner of motor vehicles, who is now urging the proposed change in the accounting system.

State Auditor's Stand

"Had the bill advocated by the county auditors been passed, the whole problem would have been solved," Thomas declares.

In the communication sent out to county auditors, Deputy State Auditor Peckinpaugh says that under the present plan of issuing licenses to non-residents an "accurate accounting is difficult, if not impossible."

Should a majority of the county auditors disapprove the suggested change, the plan now in effect will be continued, Peckinpaugh's communication indicated.

Marion County auto licenses issued annually in other counties total several hundred, County Auditor Thomas says.

The annual sale of license tags throughout the state is scheduled to start Dec. 1. The distribution here will take place, as in the past, at the office of the Marion Auto Club.

Indian Summer Will Not Arrive In This Locality Until After Prelude Known as Squaw Winter, Says Weatherman

THE melancholy days are here, according to the poet who so designates this season of the year, but whether an element of pronounced sadness goes with it depends upon the size of our bank accounts, if any.

Even though bordering on a state of penury, it behooves us not to become unduly downcast or lachrymose. For Indian summer will soon be with us, and when it arrives there will be no reasonable grounds for an epidemic of even the faintest shade of blues.

The exact time for the advent of Indian summer in this locality is not scheduled, but ordinarily it comes some time in November or the latter part of October, we are told by Dr. E. H. Raffensperger, Marion's government weather observer.

Already Here, Claim

There are some local residents who aver that the summer section of the fall season actually made its appearance several days ago, but this is not confirmed by Dr. Raffensperger, who knows weather and its local history probably better than any other person in the community.

Real Indian summer will not come, he says, until after the prelude known as "squaw winter," if the weather vane runs true to form this year. And when Indian summer arrives, there will be no difficulty in identifying it without question.

It will be accompanied by a return of symptoms of spring fever pervading the human system and a desire to cast off the heavy underwear prematurely put into use during the visit of "squaw winter."

Easily Recognized

And "squaw winter" will be easily recognized, for it measures up to its name in every respect, Dr. Raffensperger says. There will be the nip of heavy frosts creating a longing for a counteracting nip of warming stimulants for those who have a taste for such beverages and who have the means of meeting the somewhat excessive demands of the modern vendor of either bona fide or synthetic wet goods.

The entire fall weather schedule is largely theoretical and problematical, Dr. Raffensperger points out. It may be that the unexpected might occur with neither squaw winter nor Indian summer being decidedly in evidence.

But records of the past show that there have been few if any years which failed to work out according to the more or less mythical schedule. Weather conditions are fickle and variable, especially in the fall, and that's probably why the poet, in a moment of obvious depression, designated it as the season of "melancholy days."
